newspaper in Norwich, and in forwarding that enterprise, I have sold out to experienced and practical printers the whole of my sundry plant. I thank the public kindly for their liberal patronage extended to the Job Printing Establishment during the year gone by, and on behalf of Messrs. Jaffery and Craib, the proprietors and publishers of the Norwich Gazette I must ask you to increase and continue your patronage and thereby secure the advantage of a local paper in our growing community.

I shall continue the conveying business in all its branches in the same rooms as formerly Miller Block, Norwich.

Yours Very respectfully
Claudius Tidey

How long R.M. Jaffery and Peter Craib were together is not known, but some time before 1880 R.M. left the business to go with his brother J.P. to Chicago where they started a paper called the "Wheeling Journal".

Later they began publishing a paper known as the "Canadian American". The brothers sold out their American venture both returning to Canada, J.P. to the Galt Reporter and R.M. to Windsor.

CRAIB AND MILLER
Peter Craib took into partnership William Miller, a son of D.W. Miller who owned the block from where the Gazette was published. During this period it must be assumed that record keeping and filing was not looked upon as necessary or perhaps these particular records have been lost over the years.

From the odd paper we have during these years it seems that Mr. Miller discontinued his association with the paper because Peter Craib was the only name carried in the flag during 1880.

BARTHOLOMEW ERA

The Bartholomew publishership began around the end of 1880, but the flag still
