echoing in the cause of liberty, equal-shells I use, because by doing so I ily and fraternity, while the words of Deutschland ueber alles, stand for the men. The more ammunition the less tyranny and egotism of a military despot.

The professors of Germany are phase of its modern development. No nation, however, can be great if she has nothing but professors, and no prophets. Germany had had one prove phet, Martin Luther, who stood before id- kings and princes and defied them in m the name of God, like Jeremian of od old, as a wall of brass and a pillar of ol- iron.

Today Germany has one prophet, ed whom he described as a prophet out on the spree, Wilhelm, the actor. we whose god was the devil of other nations. He pooh-poohed the idea that at Wilhelm is not to blame, for he had ur wrought all the evil by his insensate vanity. He is the most versatile persen: As an admiral, he had the longhe was the greatest general; as a soldier. preacher, he was as plous ... an old Scottish covenanter, or as his own grandfather, and he was in turn poet, musician, painter-in fact, he was described by Homer himseif, who said ot one of his characters, "Many things he knew, and badly he knew them all."

The secret of the kaiser's character was that he was, in everything, an actor, eager. like Bottom, to play l'yramus, Thisbe, the wall or the lion, but, like Bottom, ending in the ass's head. In whatever part he played, the bray was never concealed.

The German national emblem was a pig, and like a pig he behaved; but like a pig, he had gone peyond his caracity when he aimed at taking to the sea, the element commanded by Britain, for, like a pig, he was finding out that, when launched upon the water, he was cutting his own throat with his claws.

One of the most marvellous symptoms in Germany of today was the hate of England, a hate which is being fostered by every professor and being made into a religious cult by every family, and which gave clear evidence of the incapacity of the German race to become a fuling power. nt They might have attained the ability as to create power, but they had yet to learn to make use of it in a decent, humane and civilized manner.

in conclusion he sketched the German program as being the banishing from their society of everything English, and with everything English, all things Russian and French also, and including in the same bun all the noutrai nations, leaving Germany preme in a world where everything non-German was non-existent, the recuctio ad absurdum of national insolerce.

"I know that when the time comes for the great move we can break through the Germans."

The case of the king versus Amelia Palma, the Italian who is charged with the murder of William Leihenen, at the latter's homestead near Kaministiquia, last fall is occupying the attention of the supreme court today at Port Arthur. L. Davidson, of Toronto, is prosecuting attorney and W. D. B. Turville, of Port Arthur, is defending the prisoner.

The crime for which Palma is being tried was a particularly dastardly one. Leihenen was found lying in a pool of blood near his shack friends a short time after the killing He had been killed by bullets from a revolver which was found lying near his when picked up. The evidence submitted at the inquest held by Dr. Birdsall, coroner, pointed directly to murder and the examination of the Italian Palma, who was arrested through the clever detective work of Provincial Constable Symons, of Port Arthur, several weeks later caused the prisoner's committment for trial.

Civil Action.

The time of the court yesterday was fully taken up by the case of M. n. Braden versus the Variow Foundries, limited, in which the plaintiff is suing the foundry people for $20,000 damages. The case conmenced at 1 o'clock and was not finished until 12 o'cloock, midnight. Judgment was reserved.

True Bills.

True bills were brought in the grand jury in four of the five crimin, al cases of the list, namely the king! versus Amelia Palma, charge, matder, the king versus Peter Kebiuik. atempted murder, the King versus Lappinen, attempted murder, and the king versus Elmer Perkins, charge living on the proceeds of prostitution. in the case of the king versual outs Schmidt, charge, rape, no true bill was obtained .-
