very independent, and said if he had known they would have asked him so many questions he would not have come in. Mrs. Swanlock and D. Jan e were just in ahead of us. They and their husbands had been taken prisoners by some of Big Bear's tribe. These two women saw their husbands shot and left in their sight for three days and were not permitted to go near them. They were subsequently rescued by a band of mounted police who brought them to camp. We also visited the graves of the poor fellows who fell at Cutknife. Their comrades were fencing the mounds, and would stop occasionally to wipe away a tear. It is an easy matter to read of such things as these, but when we are eye witnesses to such scenes, watching the work go on in silence, it makes us feel sad. A few more such trips were made, similar to the one above described, and then we returned home, drew a few long breaths, and went to work again upon our farms as though nothing had happened.

With Our Correspondents.

Kimberley.
From our own Correspondent.
Camping parties from Acton and Flesherton pitched their tents along the banks of the river among the blood-thirsty mosquitoes. The Acton campers fought them for a night or two but the mosquitoes seem to have got the best of them, for upon going to the place one morning the tent could not be found. Even the pots were carried away and the only evidence that humanity had once existed there, was a few dry bones which had been picked clean and left to bleach in the sun; (fish bones.) We fear the Flesherton campers would have met a similar fate had they not armed themselves with a lotion of mosquito exterminator.
