LE MORT DU ROI.

Sir John Macdonald is dead. Our king of statesmen is no more. The reaper has gathered a sheaf ripened for the harvest, and Canada mourns as she never mourned before.

Sir John Macdonald is dead—yet he lives. He will always live. A great man cannot die. Plato, Homer, Dante, Socrates, Wm. Pitt, Washington, Abraham Lincoln—they are all with us still.

A bright star has fallen from our firmament, yet its course is not beyond our ken, for its light will continue to be shed through coming ages.

Party rancor is hushed, and some of the most glowing eulogies to the memory of our idol come from those who saw fit to differ totally with him during his life. All unite in saying that he was Canada's greatest son, and one of the few great statesmen of our age.

May our hero rest in peace,

The remains of the dead Premier lay in state in the Senate chamber until Wednesday, when they were taken to Kingston for interment in Cataraqui cemetery.

COUNTY ROADS.

That there are very many arguments which could be brought forward in favor of the county council taking charge of the roads in this county cannot be gainsaid.

owing to the partial nature of the proprietorship it was found an injustice to maintain the system in its then form. There were townships which were paying county road rates and reaped practically no benefit from their monies.

During the inclement season of the year Grey county roads are in a most wretched condition. This fact is patent to every county councillor. About a decade or so ago, we understand these roads were handed over to the tender care of the township municipalities, and of course ceased to be dignified by the name county highways.

Where so many intelligent men have seats at the county board, it is quite unnecessary to suggest ways and means. Suffice to say our roads are a disgrace to the county, and each and every one of the county councillors is aware of this fact.

The people of Grey county do not sustain tribal relations—we are a great commonwealth, one people and indivisible. We look to the county council, as the parent institution, to place our leading thoroughfares in satisfactory position at once.

The Sun of last week says: The Advance is one of the best conducted of our exchanges. We are glad to notice it battling for better county roads.
