A Thrilling Adventure.

The Pan Presbyterian Council which has been in session in Toronto held an excursion to Niagara Falls on Saturday last. While there an accident of a thrilling nature occurred. Many of those who have visited Niagara Falls have passed over the International Bridge, which is reserved for foot and carriage traffic and which affords an excellent view of the river and the waterfall, and they will therefore understand the particulars of the scene without much effort of memory imagination. The iron railing which runs along the side of the bridge would be sufficient protection for the most reckless or the most unsteady if they were supplemented with some strong wire netting. But as they are now there is a possibility, especially in the case of a child, of a pedestrian falling through the spaces between the bars. This possibility was amply demonstrated by the incident of Saturday. It was across this bridge then that Mrs. Grimson of 57 Major Street, Toronto, was passing, accompanied by her two daughters and Rev. John Ramsey, L.L.D., of Ballymoney, Ireland, who during the continuance of the council is her guest. They had got about one-quarter of the distance across and were on the point of retracing their steps to take the returning train when the accident occurred. Until this time they had occupied the roadway as being safer than the sidewalk—safer to one whose head is easily turned on a height—and as affording a view equally good. The approach of a carriage forced them to the sidewalk. The planks of the footwalk are a few inches higher than the floor of the bridge, a fact overlooked by Mrs. Grimson, and the one to which the trouble was due. She was slightly behind the others, and in stepping up rather sharply her foot caught on the plank, and before she could pull herself up she went head first through one of the spaces in the railing. The absolute horror of her companions at her sudden disappearance under circumstances which to them meant nothing but certain death is impossible of description. For a moment they were rooted to the ground with horror and amazement. They had seen her just as she passed over the side, and before they could reach an arm to save her she was out of sight. Dr. Ramsey, jumping to the side of the bridge, felt a great sensation of joy and sudden hope in seeing her clinging to one of the iron bracing against which she had fallen in her descent. He shouted to her to hold on with all the energy she possessed and he would find aid at once. She needed no encouragement to do this. She was clinging with all the despairing tenacity with which one is capable under such appalling circumstances. Her position was as secure as the situation would admit of. She had fallen astraddle of the bar, and thus while her strength and her senses continued she had but to balance herself to keep from falling off. To the eye-witnesses of the scene however, it was one of hopeless horror. It seemed impossible that assistance would ever reach her in time, and she, a woman of over 60 years, enfeebled by age and by fright, clinging with a despairing and, but for the necessities of the case, an infirm embrace, to a narrow strip of iron and with nothing but that between her and the howling river 170 feet below. How could she preserve her consciousness? How she did retain it during the ten minutes taken up in procuring ropes for her rescue she will probably herself never be able to understand. But if those ten minutes were full of unutterable terror to her, with what unspeakable horror, with what alternating sensations of hope and despair, with what emotion of anguish were they charged to her daughters. Unable to repress their own grief or to hide the horror in their white faces, they yet tried to buoy up the courage and strength of their mother with words of hope and love. It was for them a day crowded into ten minutes, but with the expiration of that ten minutes came assistance. Mr. Ramsey had returned from the end of the bridge with ropes and assistants, one of whom was the bridge policeman. The ropes were quickly tied to the bridge, and the rev. delegate, as brave in danger as faithful in his calling, and young and active withal, with his companions descended hand over hand to the side of the imperilled woman. She had succeeded in retaining her position till then, and a rope passed about her body, under her arms and securely fastened gave ample assurance of her safety. It was not a moment too soon however. Her strength collapsed as her deliverers reached her, and a few seconds later their labor would have been without results. Several of the excursionists by this time had reached the scene, among them being Mr. Harvey, Mr. Nairn, Mr. Hugh Blain and Mr. Dalton, and never did these gentlemen pull with more hearty good-will than on the rope by which this unfortunate lady was rescued from a watery grave and restored to the arms of her daughters. The strangest part of the whole occurrence, and the part which cannot be explained, is how she fell against the iron bracing. To do so she had to fall in under the bridge. If her descent had been straight nothing could have saved her; and how she succeeded in getting so far under in such a short distance from where she fell off is and must remain a mystery. She was taken to a hotel, but although suffering from the great nervous shock, she was able to return to Toronto on the excursion train. Dr. Causland, after an examination, found that she had not been injured physically.—[Globe.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral

Has no equal for the prompt relief and speedy cure of Colds, Coughs, Croup, Hoarseness, Loss of Voice, Preacher's Sore Throat, Asthma, Bronchitis, La Grippe, and other derangements of the throat and lungs. The best-known cough-cure in the world, it is recommended by eminent physicians, and is the favorite preparation with singers, actors, preachers and teachers. It soothes the inflamed membrane, loosens the phlegm, stops coughing, and induces repose.

taken for consumption, in its early stages, checks further progress of the disease, and even in the later stages, it eases the distressing cough and promotes refreshing sleep. It is agreeable to the taste, needs but small doses, and does not interfere with digestion or any of the regular organic functions. As an emergency medicine, every household should be provided with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"Having used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for many years, I can confidently recommend it for all the complaints it is claimed to cure. Its sale is increasing yearly with me, and my customers think this preparation has no equal as a cough cure."—S. W. Parent, Queensbury, N.B.
