British Columbia's Possibilities.

E. E. Sheppard, of Toronto Saturday Night, has recently visited the Pacific coast, and writes very entertainingly of his visit. With regard to the farming possibilities of British Columbia he says: The forests of British Columbia are almost tropical; the flowers are as beautiful and as sweet-scented as those which we take such great pains to preserve in hot-houses here in the East. One of the difficulties of farming in that land is that trees as big around as an ordinary table are growing above trees which have been lying in the soil for a century, and then under that tree you will perhaps find another tree! It costs from a hundred to two hundred dollars an acre to clear such land; this the people of British Columbia say is what has prevented it from becoming an agricultural country. The people of British Columbia are unaware that they are telling what is not exactly true. British Columbia was peopled originally by miners and half-pay officers and men who did not propose to peddle or engage in small tasks. In proof of this let me quote the possibilities of the delta at New Westminster at the mouth of the Fraser, where great fields of alluvial soil have been heaped up and which can be bought for a very few dollars an acre. On it you can raise small fruits, large fruits, grass, everything that should make a country rich, that should make the tables of a province groan with plenty. They are reclaiming lands all through the province where a plough can be put in almost immediately, and yet nearly all their fruit and vegetables are imported from California. Nobody seems disposed to enter into or to organize the business of raising this sort of thing. There is rain enough—if there is anything against the Pacific coast it is too much rain—but for the small farmer, the man who wants a little piece of land and is willing to work, there is no place like British Columbia. It is so easy to live there that men get lazy. The possibilities of making a large fortune in mining are so plentiful that the small farmers, the market gardener, the butter maker, the manufacturer of cheese gets above his business and won't tackle it, and over the thousands of miles of prairie and mountain they bring their butter and cheese from Ontario right into the heart of British Columbia, where grasses are more green and more succulent than in Ontario and where they last the year round. It irritated me to see people neglecting their opportunities as they are doing in British Columbia. Shiploads of fruit and vegetable are carried from California to Victoria and Vancouver; trainloads of ham and bacon from Ontario, carloads of frozen beef from Calgary are being emptied into that province when they could raise everything themselves if they would only cure themselves of the mining fever and the town lot craze and get down to business. This I can say, if I were foot-loose and desired to build up a business or to have a ranch where the flowers bloom nearly all the year round, where a hard winter is the exception, where I could raise cows and make butter and cheese, and have fruits and vegetables and everything that make up the necessities of a family and the possibilities of an agricultural fortune, I feel quite sure I should settle in British Columbia, though between here and there there are a million chances for the poor man to become competent and for the man with a competence to become rich.

Christian Endeavor Cleanings.

"The Study of the Bible," Drummond. First: The Bible came out of religion, not religion out of the Bible. The Bible is a product of religion, not a cause of it. The historical books came out of facts; the devotional books came out of experience; the letters came out of circumstances; and the gospels came out of all three. For the distant past there flowed among the heathen nations a small, warm stream, like the Gulf Stream in the cold Atlantic—a small stream of religion, and now and then, at intervals, men, carried along by the stream, uttered themselves in words, and it is not the words so much that are inspired as the men. Secondly: These men were authors, they were not pens. Thirdly: It is a great convenience, but in some respects a great misfortune that these books have always been bound together and given out as one book, when they are not; because that has led to endless mistakes in theology and in practical life. Fourthly: These books, written at intervals of hundreds of years, were collected after the last of the writers were dead—long after—by human hands. Where were the books? Take the New Testament. There were four lives of Christ. One was in Rome; one was in Southern Italy; one was in Palestine; one in Asia Minor. There were seventy-one letters. Five were in Greece and Macedonia; five in Asia; one in Rome. The rest were in the pockets of private individuals. In those days the Christians scattered up and down through the world exchanged copies of these letters, very much as geologists exchange specimens of minerals at the present time.

Who made up the complete list? It was never formally made up. The bishops of the different churches would draw up a list each of the books that they thought ought to be put into this testament. The churches also would give their opinion. Scholars like Jerome would investigate the authenticity of the different documents, and there came to be a general consensus of the church on the matter. But no formal closing of the canon was ever attempted.

Thos. Crispin, of Normanby, while descending a hill with a heavy load of cream for the factory, met with an accident. He was pitched off the load which fell on him, killing him instantly.

S. Perry, of Schomberg, was preparing some poison to destroy rats around his premises, and placed it on some bread on a plate and set the plate on a table. His attention was called to another part of the room for a moment; meanwhile his 8 year old son Loftus came in from another room, and seeing the bread on the plate took a piece and put it in his mouth. His eldest sister at once told him there was poison on the bread and he spit it out, but he died in great agony two hours later.

Henry Kidd, octogenarian, resident of Mono Mills, is just now engaged in the construction of a huge vault for the reception of his remains after death. The site selected is on the roadside, under the brow of a hill around which the road winds just beyond the village limits. Kidd's Sepulchre, which is now nearly completed, is built of red stone, well dressed, with an artistically arched roof. The dimensions inside are 16x12 feet. Two bodies have already been deposited in air-tight metallic caskets in this tomb. The old man is quite proud of his sepulchre and says it cost him $1,000.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: "I had been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness, Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion until my health was gone. I bought one bottle of South American Nerve, which done me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy. I consider it the grandest medicine in the world." A trial bottle will convince you. Warranted by Richardson & Co.

A little item in a newspaper may sometimes make a man an enemy to the paper for life, but it won't stop him from reading it. It merely changes him from a subscriber to a borrower. Every publisher can recall the names of citizens who come under this head.

Rheumatism Cured in a day.—South American Rheumatic Cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Warranted by Richardson & Co.

James Murdock, a Scotch shoemaker, of Mount Forest, aged 60 years, was killed on the Grand Trunk track about two miles from that town last week.
