DOT'S CORNER.

For Red-haired Girls.

I have a little friend, who, because she happens to possess a head of burnished copper-coloured hair—the kind that Titian loved to paint—thinks that she cannot wear any color but golden brown. And when expostulated with by some one more reckless than wary, she answers learnedly from heavy articles and ponderous tomes on dress, and squelches us by such names as Helen Gilbert, Ecob and Mrs. Jenness Miller, and really seems to have the best of it, adding, by way of the last straw, that “we do not require of the robin a frequent change of color, nor of the oak that it produce alternately a green leaf and a brown.” But we are still unconvinced. For memory brings a vision of a young girl whose tawny brown eyes, copper colored hair and creamy skin (with an occasional freckle we must admit) were admirably set off by a rich green gown, or at other times seen to advantage in contrast with the wonderful blue of the peacock.

Why, for the last five years my friend has looked like a study in sepia, where as she might have looked like an oil painting. To be sure the sepia is artistic, harmonious, and certainly “safe,” but after all monotonous.

Every artist knows the value of contrast. “When you have learned what light and shade can do for you,” says one, “you have scored a great victory.” And so my friend, by insisting upon being “a study in brown,” has lost in brilliancy what she has gained in harmony.

Having had my say and insisted upon my own position, that the “girl of the auburn locks” is not necessarily restricted to one gamut of colors, I thought I would turn up an article I had read some time ago entitled “Beautiful red hair,” feeling sure I should be upheld in my position, when lo! I was abashed to read thusly: “Another advantage lies in the fact that the possession of red hair restricts the owner to a narrow but select range of color. And you call that an advantage? cry the phalanx of the red-haired sisters. Undoubtedly I do, and to prove it, I ask if, in your inmost souls, you do not adore pink and cherish the belief that it suits you? Of course you do. I never knew any one of your coloring who did not. Restriction as to color, if universal, and regulated on a basis of good taste, would make England more celebrated than ever for handsome women or pretty girls, many of whom now ruin their looks by wearing wrong tints. And what may the red-haired wear? I will tell you. If you wish to be insipid and common-place wear pale blue. That has been the heritage of the red-haired for centuries. If you would like to jump out of that deepened groove and wish to look a very poem, buy warm golden browns, orange-tinted yellows, ruddy cream colors, with a flash as from russet leaves upon them, terra cottas and the whole range of such tints as are exemplified in primroses, buttercups, marigolds, tea roses, Mareschal Neils and Gloire de Dijon, chestnut browns, chocolate, dull wallflower reds and dull gold colors.”

Not one word, you see, of my favorite greens and peacock blues; but I cannot let that allusion to the trees always wearing green pass unnoticed, as I consider it a most unfortunate one for the argument of my friend. For if we turn to nature we shall find that no two seasons present the same aspect, as to coloring. From the tender greens and yellows and subtle greys of spring Dame Nature imperceptibly merges into the deep, strong tones of the natural summer, only to doff these for the multi-colored brilliancy of autumn and the hazy blueness and orange sunsets of Indian summer, to finally shroud herself for the grave of winter. The Companion Calendar for 1896.

The Publishers of the Youth's Companion are sending to their subscribers free an art calendar which will be highly appreciated. Four elegant water-color paintings are reproduced in all the beauty of color and design of the originals, and of such size (7 1/2 x 10 inches) that they may be framed with fine effect. The first two pictures offer a striking contrast, a blustering March day in the sugar orchard, and a peaceful scene in midsummer. Then follows the noonday rest in the harvest-field, a charming bit of color with a foreground of goldenrod and brilliant autumn foliage. The winter walk to church over the snow-covered fields is the last of the series. To all the new subscribers to the paper who send their name and address and $1.75 at once, the publisher offers to send free this handsome calendar, lithographed in nine colors, the retail price of which is 50 cents, the Companion free every week to January 1, 1896, including the Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's double number, and the Youth's Companion fifty-two weeks, a full year to January 1, 1897. Address, The Youth's Companion, 195 Columbus Avenue, Boston.

JAS. CAVANAGH, Tp. Clerk.

A good story is told of a French Tory at Montreal the other day, while lamenting the condition of the Conservative party. “When,” said he, “we lost Sir John Macdonald we lost ze backbone of ze parte, when we lost Sir John Thomsing we lost ze head of ze parte, and now we have nothing left but ze Bowells.”

The Gravenhurst Banner declares that Gravenhurst has about as much use for a market as a pig with two tails.—Stayner Sun. Now here is a question for debate. Has a pig with two tails got any more use for a market that one with one tail?
