Result of a Neglected Cold.

DISEASED LUNGS

Which Doctors Failed to Help,

CURED BY TAKING

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

"I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, and I did what is often done in such cases, neglected it, thinking it would go away as it came; but I found, after a little while, that the slightest exertion pained me. I then consulted a Doctor who found, on examining my lungs, that the upper part of the left one was badly affected. He gave me some medicine which I took as directed, but it did not seem to do any good. Fortunately, I happened to read in Ayer's Almanac, of the effect that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral had on others, and I determined to give it a trial. After taking a few doses my trouble was relieved, and before I had finished the bottle I was cured."—A. LEFLAR, watchmaker, Orangeville, Ont.

Inspector Harris visited the Neustadt hotels on a recent Saturday and in the evening departed for home, at least that was the impression conveyed, but returning suddenly found at Rettinger's hotel sufficient evidence to warrant him laying a charge for infringement of license law. The case was tried before Police Magistrate Ryan and hinged upon the amount of intoxicant contained in the wine sold under the name of "Golden Diana." The Magistrate decided that Diana came under the ban, so Mr. Rettinger was assessed the customary twenty dollars and costs.—Chronicle.

An exchange says: The most popular country editor as well as the most popular country preacher is the one who avoids stepping upon anybody's toes, but he is necessarily a hypocrite. Every man must have ideas, opinions and convictions of his own, and the editor who never ventures an adverse opinion or criticism is a coward and a lick-spittle, unworthy of the position which he professes to fill. When he fails to condemn wrong he is something worse than a hypocrite. On political and other public questions he can never be located until his keen ears detect the rustle of bank notes, or his itching palm clutches the clandestine puff. Self and hoodie are his aim and object.

The Philadelphia Record tells of a good old Methodist lady who became very happy one Sunday under the preaching of the Word, and ejaculated, "Glory!" She was admonished to keep quiet by two of the brethren, and nodded assent, but soon becoming forgetful responded, "Hallelujah!" The brethren again called her attention to the annoyance and told her that if she did not keep quiet they would be compelled to remove her. The sermon proceeded, and the old lady becoming very happy and forgetful of her surroundings, shouted out, "Glory to God!" This was to much for the brethren, and they tried to lead her out, but she refused to walk, so they carried her. On her way she said: "I am honored above my Master, for, while he was carried by one ass, I am carried by two."

Within a little more than a year Mr. Eustace Bennett of the town line, Collingwood and St. Vincent, has suffered two heavy losses by fire. A year ago last summer his house and all it contained was burned. The second visit of the fire fiend came last Saturday afternoon, when his large barn and stables, with all their contents, were consumed. The fire started at 3 o'clock, and no cause for its origin can be imagined, as no one had been in the barn since noon. Nothing but a small calf was got out. All the season's grain—about 300 bushels of wheat, a large quantity of oats and $150 of clover seed, all the straw and hay, and all Mr. Bennett's farm implements were consumed. The loss is estimated at $2500, with $3000 insurance. The loss is all the greater to Mr. Bennett on account of the present scarcity of feed, and the fact that he has a lot of stock on hand.—Standard.

She Would, Wouldn't, Would

LOUGHBORO—LEACH—At Scarborough Junction, on Nov. 13, inst., by the Rev. Mr. Fitzpatrick, Miss Bella Laughlin of Artamesia to Mr. Matthew Leach of Proton.

In connection with the above marriage the Mail recently published the following amusing story. Our Inistioige correspondent tells the sequel:

"Marriage is a failure," was the conclusion arrived at by a party of four young ladies, one clergyman, and a young man, who were in conference last evening in the parlor of one of the leading downtown hotels.

It is a case of "Don't love him enough", and "Mother did it." Some time ago a young lady, Miss Laughlin by name, who resided with her mother near Flesherton, Ont., and a well-to-do young farmer of the same place, fell deeply in love, at least the young farmer did. He proposed, and it is said the young lady's mother did the rest.

The happy young fellow naturally became fired with ambition to wed Miss Laughlin and take her at once to a house of his own. She, in the meantime, has gone to stay with some friends in or near Scarborough. There the young farmer followed her, and on Wednesday last the nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Mr. Kilpatrick. The ceremony was fittingly celebrated, and the happy young couple danced to their hearts' delight at the "hoo-down." Immediately after the festivities, however, young Mrs. Leach suddenly discovered that their two hearts did not move in harmony, and she killed his new born happiness by telling him she "didn't love him a little bit." He wept copiously, and taking his goods and chattels, he boarded the first train for his home.

Yesterday the bride and three assistants arrived in the city and telegraphed for her husband to come back to his first love, and to be sure to bring back her clothes with him. He did come back but there is no record available for publication of the arrival of the goods. The young ladies on his arrival here asked permission to use the parlor of a hotel in the centre of the city, and, accompanied by the Rev. Mr. Kerr, held a conference with the one object in view of untying the matrimonial fastening. The young man then appeared on the scene, weeping freely, and this being infectious, immediately set the four young ladies, including the bride, at the same distressing occupation. It was in vain that the rev. gentleman entreated the company to cease their tears, but he finally managed to explain, between the sobs, that the knot could not be undone. The bride would hear of nothing but a severance, as she said she never did love him, never could and never would. On the other hand "he" was silent and seemed willing to submit to anything, seeing he had to deal with four women instead of one.

In the end the minister advised the couple to kiss and make up, but this being impossible told them to separate for a time at least. This was the ultimate outcome of the conference. The young ladies left the hotel with the minister, closely followed by the young farmer, who after sauntering about in the cold for a few hours, relieved his feelings to a fellow sympathizer, and then feeling better, drove to his hotel. He expects to leave for his home to-day about noon, a sadder yet wiser man.

The Farmer's Paper

Since its first issue The Toronto Weekly Globe has been noted for its deep enduring interest in the welfare of the Canadian farmer. What portion of the community has been kept steadily in the forefront, and the agriculturists of the country have not been slow to recognize its manly independence and forceful utterances on their behalf in the great struggles of the past. To-day it is as truly the farmer's friend as at any time in its career, and as a newspaper it is better than ever. Every page is brimful of good reading. The special department for the practical farmer and the home circle are always delightfully entertaining and instructive. In enterprise as a news-gather it has no successful rival.
