IN MEMORIAM Lines written in memory of John Fenwick, who died August 16, 1899. Free from all pain or sorrow, Our loved one is at rest. No anxious sad to-morrow Disturbs his peaceful breast While those he loved sit weeping Within that lonely home. And listening for the footsteps That nevermore shall come. All earthly means to save him His wife and children tried, When doctor's skill availed not In anguish sore they cried. Resigned and calm, he told them, "Dear ones, weep not for me; I soon shall be with Jesus To live eternally." All kindred ties are severed, The mandate has been given, The golden band is broken, The silver cord is riven; The beaming heart is silent, The weary frame at rest, His ransomed soul is sleeping Upon his Saviour's breast. With saddened hearts they laid him In his long, silent sleep, Where flowers bloom above him And birds their vigils keep. God gave and He has taken, He only claims his own; His ways are full of mercy, So let His will be done. Dear mourners, cease thy weeping, Let not thy hearts be sad, Thy loved one is in heaven— That thought should make thee glad. Since he has gained the victory Earth's trials all are o'er, And soon you all shall meet him On that celestial shore.
