...W LIQUOR BILL

...itney's liquor bill as brought the Legislature last week has he temperance people a rude They can see very little that is in the bill, and can see very much that is objectionable. Among he more objectionable features is the proposal to allow liquor to be sold on trains and boats, which is certainly a retograde movement. The proposal to reduce the time limit from three to two years, when it is possible to change the local option law or Scott Act in any municipality, is looked on being a pernicious piece of legislation. Finally, the requiring of a three-fifths vote to pass or repeal any temperance measure is strongly objected to on the ground that it is not required in any other instance and is not "British fair play." This objection is probably taken by both sides to the question, but the temperance element have let their voices be heard in the matter in no uncertain strain. Outside of these three points the bill is a good one, from the temperance view point, with probably the exception of the high license clauses, which were not asked for or desired by temperance people. Among the more commendable features are increasing of penalties, licensing of bar tenders, penalizing the sale of adulterated liquors, protection of witnesses, no "tied" houses and votes on local option to take place on day of municipal election. These are all commendable features. As the bill stands, however, it strikes a blow at local option which will make it a very small factor in temperance reform and render futile much of the work that has already been done along that line. There is an intimation, however, that before the bill becomes law some of its more objectionable features will be eliminated or toned down.

The new County Council bill in the Legislature practically puts our county councils on the same footing as they were previous to the reduction. We believe the government has been misled in this matter and that among the rank and file of the people there is no desire for a change from the present system. Our county affairs are managed as economically and as satisfactorily as under the old law and the cost of administration has been considerably lessened. The best men are now elected to our county councils, but under the old system much poor timber found its way to the council board. The agitation for a change has been largely prosecuted by those whose ambitions led them county councilward and who, under the present good law, found it impossible to satisfy their craving for representation.

Eugenia

Last Wednesday evening a number of the friends of Miss Henderson, our popular teacher and organist in the Presbyterian church, met in the basement of the church after prayer meeting and presented her with an address and an elegant gold chain also a pretty writing desk. Miss Henderson was taken by surprise at the kind feeling manifested and thanked the donors in kindly terms. She has endeared herself to the school children and also to the young people, with whom she was a general favorite, and all part with her with sincere regrets. She has got a good position at Toronto Junction. Eugenia school will never get a better teacher.

Before the removal of Mr. Purvis and family to Toronto the members of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid met last Wednesday evening and presented Mrs. Purvis Sr. with a Bible and hymn book, also Mrs. Robert Purvis with a jardiniere and s and and a lovely bon bon dish, and an address to both ladies. They were surprised and thanked the society for their kindness. All felt sorry to part with such valuable members as both have been. They are part of the first members who joined when the society was organized and their removal leaves a gap in the order which will be hard to fill. Both are retired officers of the society. Refreshments were served after the presentation and a very happy time spent All joined in singing "God be with you till we meet again."

Not much doing yet at Eugenia. The work at the tunnel is still progressing.

Mrs. Gilliland has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Hargrave of the Collingwood gravel, for some time.
