There was an exciting time at S. A. Gray & Co's. store yesterday morning when one of the clerks discovered a skunk secreted under the grate of the front window. How the little animal got there was a mystery that no one could solve. Within a very short space of time a large crowd of men and boys had congregated in front of the store devising ways and means for dislodging his skunkship without filling the air with a perfume not exhaled by either the rose or the lily. Finally it was resolved to chloroform the little creature, and this was done quite successfully after which a shot from a revolver put an end to its existence.—Meaford Mirror.
