BABY'S FIB.

Baby, walking in the dark, Heard one night a big dog bark. "Let her creep," she softly said, "In your bed, for she is faid." Nestle close to mamma dear, Baby sleeps, and knows no fear, Rosy morning lights the skies And opens darling baby's eyes; Just as bright as any skies Are our darling's starry eyes; Just as fair as any day Are the curls that round them play. Nor when next night she walking thought How nice to leave her lonely cot, And creep into her mamma's bed-Oh, shall I tell you what she said?

What a little baby fib Trundled off her torgue, so glib? Put the truth it must be told-And baby's only two years old, And the night was dark and long-And she didn't know 'twas wrong-So this is what the darling said, Lying in her little bed; lo son

Though no voice of dog was heard, Though no sound the night air stirred Came a whisper in the dark; "Mamma, she fink she heard dog bark." I'm certain neither you nor me, In mamma's bed, all in the dark, She creeps, "cos she fink she hear deg too.
