PRESENTATION.

On Wednesday evening (15th inst.) a few of the Rev. N. A. McDiarmid's friends gathered at the Parsonage to spend a social evening on the occasion of the birthday of the parson. A very enjoyable time was spent during which Mr. McFarland, on behalf of the congregation, presented Mr. McDiarmid with a beautiful Astor Fur Overcoat, worth $40 retail. It was known that the reverend gentleman was in communication with dealers in such goods in Toronto with a view to purchasing such an article, and it was thought well to forestall his action and procure a coat at a very much cheaper rate to himself. Mr. McDiarmid was completely taken by surprise not having the most remote idea that he was to be the recipient of so valuable and appropriate a birthday present, and in his reply thanked the brethren present and through them those members and friends who had so cheerfully contributed to the purchase of an article he had long desired to enable him to meet with comfort the cold blasts of our rigorous winters.

Correspondence.

Notice.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

DEAR SIR,—The Rev. James Ward has seen fit to reply to my article of two weeks ago in a way peculiar to himself, he steers clear of the main question at issue. "Did he or did he not" advise his congregation to withhold countenance and aid to the church enterprises of the other religious bodies of the village? It is commonly asserted that he did do so, and he fails to deny it. Instead of answering my question he flies off at a tangent and rides his favorite hobby, the Church of England, the only true and apostolic church. Now, Mr. Editor, I acknowledge there are different denominations, but I deny entirely that the churches represented in Markdale (other than the English church) "are cut off from the old faith and church of the apostles." The original meaning of the word church was a congregation, without reference to the character of the persons composing it; or the purpose for which they assembled; the apostles seized upon the word and used it to express a company of believers meeting together to worship God. Now, they speak of the church in the house of Priscilla and Aquilla and give it a visible and local form; and again, they used the word to express that company of believers who are mystically united to Christ by a firm faith in whatever part of the earth they dwell, so that the church is either local and visible or universal and spiritual. Now, if Mr. Ward says that we are cut off from the local and visible Church of England I gladly agree with him, but if he says we are cut off from the Apostolic Church, the church of which Christ is the head and His apostles the ministers, I must politely inform him that though ranged under a different denominational banner the other churches of Markdale still cling to the "one Lord, one faith, and one baptism," and are as much, if not more, the church of Christ than the English church, which, while professedly united is, as everyone knows, rent into factions. Under the banner of the English church everything is tolerated, from broad church Rationalism to high church Romanism. Dr. Pusey on the one hand and Bishop Colenso on the other will be fitting illustrations of what I mean, and the only bond between them is that wretched figment of the imagination "apostolic succession" which will not stand for a moment enlightened investigation; and if Mr. Ward thinks it will probably it would be well for him to ponder carefully the following sentences of Bishop Hoody, one of the most eminent ministers of the English church.

"I am fully satisfied that till a consummate stupidity can be happily established and universally spread over the land, there is nothing that tends so much to destroy all due respect to the clergy as the demand of more than can be due to them, and nothing is so effectually throwing contempt upon a regular succession of the ministry as the calling no succession regular, but which was uninterrupted and the making the eternal salvation of Christians to depend upon that uninterrupted succession of which the most learned must have the least assurance, and the unlearned can have no notion but through ignorance and credulity."

Space this week will forbid my enlarging on the subject of denominationalism, but if Mr. Ward desires I am willing to discuss this matter with him in a friendly way through your columns, inasmuch as I firmly believe that he has not the shadow of a shade of proof for his dogmatic assertions that he has been making both in his pulpit and through the press. But quietly leaving these things to be discussed at another time, I want to deal with Mr. Ward's lack of courtesy in his remarks about patronizing church enterprises other than those for the benefit of the English church. Everybody knows that we are considerably divided on religious questions in this village. We have three churches very well filled every Sabbath, each church has its adherents and historic associations, we are neighbors and friends desiring to live in peace with each other, we have hitherto fraternized in social and church relations. After Mr. Ward and the other ministers who may be here now are gone we hope to live together and perpetuate the feelings of amity that now exist.

Why then does Mr. Ward try to disturb the harmony of our village by throwing the bombshell of religious animosity in the midst of our hitherto quiet community? That's the question. Let him answer that.
If the English church wishes the countenance and support of Presbyterians and Methodists then they should be willing to return the compliment, on the principal that he that hatn friends should show himself friendly. But if Mr. Ward wishes to cultivate an exclusive feeling in the minds of his people then it better be so understood by the public, that they may govern themselves accordingly. Whatever money I give to any church enterprise I never desire to have it returned, therefore I do not feel free to send my name to the reverend gentleman, and must again subscribe myself
"G."
