Artemns Ward is a worthy companion of Irving, Holmes, and Lowell, and nobly excels Mark Twain and Bret Hart, in that his wit is never impure, never immoral never irreverent. His lecture on The Mormons," the London Times, quoted by Mr. Haweis, describes as "atterly free from offense, although the opportunities for offense are obviously numerous." The lecurer and contributor to Punch says of himself : "I never stain my pages with even mild profanity. In the first place it is wicked, and in the next it is not funny." Strange that so many would-be wits lack wit to discern this truism! Another sentence of Artemus Ward is in itself an answer to a dozen Ingersoll lecturers: "'Are you a preacher?' says the royal duke, slitely sarkastical. "'No, Sir. But I bleeve in Meetin' Houses. Show me a place where there isn't any Meetin' Houses and preachers is never seen, and I'll show you a place where old hats air stuffed into broken winders, where the children are dirty and ragged, where gates have no hinges, where the wimmin are slipshod, and where maps of the devil's wild land air painted upon men's shirtbusums with tobacco jooce! That's what I'll show you. Let us consider what the preachers do for us before we aboose 'em.'"

Artemus Ward's private life was spotless, and his personality most engaging. The writer resides near the birthplace at Waterford, Me., of the boy, Charles Farrar Browne. I find that the testimony of men who were his schoolmates accords with that published by intimate associates of his manhood, to wit, that with all his inborn love of merriment and of adventure, he was exceptionally pure-minded, considerate, and unselfish. He sought not to wield his wit at cost of another's pain. He was a devoted son. He would talk to his friends of his mother as other young men talk of a sweetheart. Mrs. Browne yet lives at Water ord, and welcomes every visitor who comes to honor the memory of her son. Artemus Ward's career was pathetically brief. Printer's boy in a dozen New-England villages and cities, editor in Toledo and in Cleveland, lecturer and traveller over the land, at the age of 29 he was the most popular humorous speaker in America. He crossed the Atlantic, and his success in London seemed boundless. But meantime he was rapidly wasting with consumption, and his face turned with his heart homeward and northernward. But as he was about embarking at Southamption he died-March 6th, 1867-having not completed his thirty-first year. -The Rev. T. C. Jerome, in the Chicago Advance

Wind Force.

Three years ago we were starded and horrified by the news that the Tay bridge had fallen when a train was passing over it and the investigation which followed brought into prominent notice not only the very great diversity of opinion as to wind-pressure, but the necessity that some definite result should be arrived at. It appeared from the examination of engineers of the highest repute that they had no exact knowledge as to whether the extreme probable force of wind should be taken as 10 pounds on a square foot, or 20 or 40. It was admitted that pressures of 40 pounds had been registered, but they were considered so exceptional and restricted that it had been deemed unnecessary to make a full provision for them. But on Oct. 14, 1881, a pressure of 53 pounds was registered at Greenwich, almost at the very moment when 35 magnificent trees in the immediate neighborhood were prostrated; that particular gust of intense pressure was by no means restricted to an area of a few yards. Nor is this pressure of 53 pounds the highest that has been recorded. During a gale at Liverpool in March, 1871, the pencil anemometer was driven far beyond the scale, and was estimated to have marked a pressure of 90 pounds. It is impossible to say whether these are actual pressures or not. Prof. Stokes, who speaks with very high authority, considers that the register of a pressure plate is 80 per cent. too high, a correction which would reduce these pressures to 30 and to 50 pounds on the square foot; but many observers and men of great practical experience (among others Mr. Osler and Mr. Symons) believe that the registered pressure is, by a balance of errors, not very far from the truth. - Longman's Magazine.

A Wisconsin Snake Story.

Henry Fish of Lee Centre, who has lately come from Lone Rock, Wis., says: 'Andrew Harter of Lone Rock went out on a rocky part of his farm one day last spring, and while looking around saw the head of a rattlesnake protruding from a crevice in the rock. Taking in the general surroundings, he concluded that it must be a regular den of rattlesnakes, so he built a pen about ten feet square and three feet high about the place and awaited results. The pen was watched, and with a wire snare something like a fish snare seventy-nine scakes, varying in length from 18 inches to 41 feet, were, during the summer, landed in a barrel placed inside the enclosure. Four of the largest were placed in the barrel on Decoration Day, and in November they were still alive. As they had been placed in the barrel as soon as they left their winter quarters, they had lived a whole year without anything to eat. As the snakes had not thawed out this spring, when Mr. Fish left, it was not known whether they were still alive or not."-Rome Sentinel.

A Good Little Boy.

A mother said to her eldest boy the other night at the supper table : "Why, Franky, I never knew you to ask for preserves a second time." Franky didn't say much, but his little brother Tommy, who was innocent of the ways of bad boys, spoke up with a guileless smile on his pure little face and said-"That's because Franky lost the key he made to open the pantry. That's why ha never used to want much preserves at the supper table. He used to get all he wanted before supper, but new he can't open the pantry."

After Franky's father had administered the proper corrective, and the stricken youth was left alone in the shed to repent his crime, Tommy remarked to himself, as he sat down to study his lesson: "I expect poor Franky is sorry he didn't give me some of them preserves when I asked them from him, He will know better next time." The Dominion is being well advertised at present. Both the Reveral and Provincial Governments are sending special agents to Europe, whilst the Canada Pacific Railway authorities are working for their own interests with the same end in view. Amongst the quieter agencies tending in the same direction may be noticed the lacrosse team which has recently left Toronto, composed of a very respectable lot of young fellows, who will do credit not only to the national game but to our incipient nation as well. We notice too that a Canadian paper has been started in London which will, no doubt, prove the means of communication to a certain extent between the British and Canadian public. The more thoroughly our advantages are known the more surely will emigration of a superior class be drawn to our shores. Our disadvantages are no greater than in many other lands, though of a different kind. Such a cyclone as the one that during the past week devastated a part of the State of Mississippi is unknown in Canada, though it is of no unfrequent occurrence over some of the Western States of the Union. What we in Oatario would more specially care to see is a number of tenant farmers to take up some of our vacant homesteads. We hope that our Local Government will see to it that special efforts with that end in view are speedily and thoroughly made.

A Picture in the Heart of An Oak.

A curiosity in vegetation has been shown our Watertown correspondent by Mr. Bonjamin Marvin, of that town. It is a landscape, or rather a clump of trees, with trunk and branches and twigs as clearly defined as though drawn with ink or photographed by the sun's rays. The trees form a picture about four inches square, showing like the open leaf of a book, and the same on the opposite page. Mr. Marvin says it is a pretty good protraiture of the clump of trees which he felled, the picture appearing in the heart of the largest one. Perhaps it will be explained that this is a fungus growth, which starting near the bark, pushed its way nward and upward in the form shown. If o, it was a persistent and ambitious bit of vegetation, bound to go ahead through very discouraging circumstances. - Waterbury (Conn.) American.

A Virginian's Presentiment.

Miss Sue V. Wingfield, daughter of Judge Wingfield, of Bradford county, died recently at the residence of John A. Herring, Esq., near Bridgewater. She had been governess in Mr. Herring's family, and after an illness of a few days of rheumatism of the heart and lungs she passed away in the bloom of her young life. On leaving with the remains, Mr. Herring remarked that he would never see Miss Rebecca Davis, who was a member of his family, again, and gave instructions as to the disposition of her body, should anything occur during his absence. On the Saturday following, Miss Davis was taken suddenly sick, from which she died. She had long been one of the family and was greatly estcemed by those who knew her. It was a strange presentiment with Mr. Herring that he should express himself so confidently that he would never see his relative again.

Jealousy in Africa

When a Magololo suspects his wives he places a stone in a jar of boiling water or oil and orders them to fetch it up with their bare arms. He then judges of their guilt by the amount of injury they sustain. When a woman is thus convicted he makes her confess who seduced her. In vain does the helpless creature protest that she is innocent. Notwithstanding that her arm is severely scalded, she is subjected to the most cruel torture by a kind of thumb screw, (mbanilo,) which is applied to her head. A small tree is partly divided along the middle, the skull of the poor woman is inserted as if it were a wedge for splitting the tree still further. Great pressure is exerted by forcing the halves of the tree together with the aid of pulleys .- Africana; or, the Heart of Africa - the Rev. Duff Macdonald.

I have had no return of the disease and never felt better in my life. I have tried so many things for catarrh, suffered so much and for so many years, that it is hard for me to realize that I am
