The Standard.

MARKDALE, NOV. 8TH, 1883.

OURSELVES.

The prospects of the STANDARD is encouraging and its standing generally satisfactory. The subscription list continues to swell from week to week. At several of our neighboring post offices the number of subscribers have doubled and in some cases trebled during the past year, while in our more immediate vicinity the STANDARD is read, and its weekly visits highly appreciated, in, we believe every family (those who do not subscribe, read their neighbours paper) there are many however who are apparently contented to read the news from week to week, and year to year without paying for the same, we are losing all sympathy as well as confidence in this class and have decided to publish, early in January, the names of all who are in arrears for 1883. We give ample warning and hope to have but a short list to publish. Quite a number have already renewed for 84 and we offer the following liberal terms to those yet in arrears: We will accept cash in advance rates for this year by renewing for '84 at the same time, or in other words will accept $2 cash for 83 and 84 by paying it any time up to 15th December, otherwise $1.25 will be charged. Fair warning, we mean business.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The following sensible paragraph we clip from the Toronto Truth and commend it to the earnest consideration of all who use the weed:—At the late Sabbath School Convention a great many home truths were uttered, which it is to be hoped will do a great deal of good. One gentleman was specially hard upon tobacco, but not, Truth fancies, too hard. It seems it was the ruin of that poor worthless fool, Mann, the L'Original murderer. It has been the ruin of a great many better men. It is making a set of weak, nervous, wasteful mumble, good for nothings, in spite of the fact that a good many sensible people smoke. To see the sidewalks of the principle streets of this city on a Sunday evening, is a caution. It would seem if it had rained saliva. Faugh!

Truth says:—Who would be a candidate for Parliamentary honors? Why he may be unseated before he knows what he is about. If he calls a public meeting, and addresses the promiscuous crowd in some such terms as "Well, friends, I hope you will all do your best for me," these simple words constitute every man jack in that crowd an agent, and if any one of them do an illegal act, however much it may be to the poor candidate's injury, he is responsible all the same. This seems awfully hard. Still it is all the same.

The new Governor has arrived and after all the usual ceremonies have been gone through finds himself quietly settled in Rideau Hall. The political range of his work is very limited. He apparently has no individuality, but must do what his Ministers bid him or dismiss them and take the consequences. Socially, however, he may be a power, and is intended to be such. If he and his wife are to succeed in this work they will need to keep very wide awake. The small citizens of Ottawa will try to capture him. The Prime Minister's wife may try to boss Lady Lansdowne, and much else that is small and disagreeable may very likely take place. If they yield to such pressure they will be undone. If they play their cards aright the nation for years hence may very likely part with them in sorrow and with a profound respect which has in it all the best elements of affection.—Truth

Correspondence.

NOTICE.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents

To Editor STANDARD.

Occasionally we read of instances in the human family where men are said to exist in duplicate; one day acting like themselves and again like some other person, known or unknown as the case may be, I begin to think that such cases may be found. That the man who quietly came to me on the day after my letter of the 11th ult. was published, and inquired if I could prove my statements, said he was sorry that this thing had ever occurred between us, he had been drawn into it and was resolved to never meddle again in such matters, and proposed that the bringing of my proof be done quietly and one man was sufficient, (this was his own proposal) that it was the same man who wrote "Mr. Pickell's Denial" in last week's Advance, is a question among the ologies I cannot answer and yet I am sure in the first instance, and presume in the second, it assumed the form and appearance of A. R. Fawcett. Now sir, on the day in question I told Mr. Fawcett it was not convenient for me to meet him but proposed doing so on Saturday evening, he said he was going away in the morning and would not return till Wednesday, and our meeting had to be postponed. Early on Thursday morning I went to his office in company with a gentleman who had waited on him as I before stated, who told him that he was sufficient proof that I had foundation for my statements and at the same time advised that the matter should end as it was of no interest to the public, it was now purely personal between Mr. Fawcett and myself, and suggested that we drop it at once and entirely. Mr. Fawcett said he would naturally like to make some reply to my letter, but this gentleman said it would not do for him to say we had smoked the pipe of peace or anything of that kind, that if we were going to settle we should say no more on either side, I said I would agree. After thinking a few moments Mr. Fawcett said he would drop it at once if I would and said I will give you my hand on it, and reached out his hand and shook hands with me to bind the agreement that our correspondence was at an end. But, sir, what shall I say of a man, who, in the presence of an honorable witness to such an agreement, which would have been sacred to any one with a spark of truth honor, or principle, daring in the very paper he was then preparing to print, to tell the public that "as W. G. Pickell had acknowledged being in error and under misapprehension, he accordingly agreed to let the matter drop." As to making any acknowledgement whatever, I have denied through your paper and do so again; as to making my "personal confession" to him this is equally false, the very idea is contemptible. If I stoop to correspond with him I have not found it necessary to make any confession to A. R. F. public or private. I have never tried, as he says to impose on him, I was not interfering with him when he first used my name in his paper, and when I withdrew my subscription I wanted to have done with him, and from the first my position has been a defensive one and will be to the end let that be when it may, as I am fully prepared to sustain myself and position and if I were his most bitter enemy I could not wish him to take any other course than the one he has chosen for himself, if he is not satisfied with what I have shown him regarding his patronage, he may find it out for himself in a more practical way before many weeks. Mr. Fawcett repeated inquires "who is W. G. Pickell." Evidently he did not know when he first made him the subject of an editorial. If he had he probably instead would have given his readers "a trip to Toronto," or an account of his adventures in his late visit to Thornbury or something equally instructive and interesting, but for present information I might tell him that W. G. Pickell was a resident of this place probably before A. R. Fawcett was out of his pinafores. The question does not interest me but I have heard it asked who is this A. R. Fawcett who professes to unearth all the dishonest, dishonorable and immoral transactions in our community. As his short stay amongst us leaves it an open question perhaps in his capacity of public instructor he will enlighten the ignorant as to who he is. Mr. Fawcett need make no allowance for hasty expression or misleading, as I am not in the habit of using the first or been drawn astray by the second. I cannot help thinking, sir, of the pit-able state of our moral atmosphere before this champion of morality appeared on the scene, and of the sloughs into which we may relapse after he has run his race amongst us. We recoil from such thoughts, viewing the matter as we do, from the elevated standpoint to which he has raised us. In conclusion, I wish to say that I expect he will deny in his reply next week, but doing so in the face of so many who know better, is to his own hurt as usual, not mine. I am sorry to draw so largely on your space on a subject so far beneath the notice of your paper or your intelligent readers. Yours respectfully, W. G. PICKELL.

The Alleghanians.

Whose name has become a household word with music-loving people of all nations, and whose continuous travels have extended to all parts of the civilized globe, performing by royal command before the crowned heads and nobility of Europe, will present on Monday evening, Nov. 12th, at the Orange hall, Markdale, one of their unique and incomparable programmes, embracing numerous vocal Specialities, new songs, new quartets, and their astonishing manipulation of 120 Swiss Bells.

We commend the following extracts selected from both hemispheres:—On Friday, these exquisite Bell Ringers and Vocalists appeared in one of their extraordinary Concerts at the Crystal Palace, when one of the most charming musical treats ever enjoyed in this place, was undoubtedly afforded those whose good fortune it was to be present.—Era (London, Eng.)

"The playing on the Bells was marvelous, and elicited the most rapturous applause; and the smirg was excellent."—Oxford (Eng.) Journal.

"I have so freely expressed my opinion of the merits of these entertainers, that I have only to add, as a word of advice, 'Go and hear them.'"—Rev. Mr. SPURGEON, London, Eng.

"The Quartets and Songs were admirably sung, and the very able manner in which airs, with variations, were rendered on the Swiss bells greatly delighted the audience, and called forth well-merited encores.—Standard (London, Eng.)

"Their music is decidedly fine, especially their quartets; and it will be long ere we forget that magnificent and heaven-inspiring chant, 'Where shall the soul find rest,' as sung by the Alleghanians.—N. Y. Independent. Tickets 25 and 50 cents. Reserved seats can be secured at A. Turne's drug store without extra charge.

"Who Wouldn't be a Printer?"

Who was the earl of Standhope? He was only a printer. What is prince Frederick William, married to the princess royal of England? He, too, was only a printer. Who was William Caxton, one of the fathers of literature? He was only a printer. Who were J. P. Norris, N. P. Willis, J. Gales, C. Richardson, Horace Greeley, Bayard Taylor, Ghas, Dickens, Thiers Jerrold, George D. Prentice, Bishop Kavanaugh Senators Dix, Cameron Plumb, and Niles? They were only printers. What was Benjamin Franklin? He was only a printer. Everybody cannot afford to be a printer—brains are necessary.

BADLY WANTED.—More street lamps; and hitching posts; a town hall; and a lock-up.

A Mount Forest Man in Luck

Our townsman Mr. Jacob Mosher is one of the lucky individuals mentioned in the following paragraph:—"Hugh L. Mosher's descendants—7 1/2 in number—asssembled in the Palmer House, Chicago, on Wednesday day last to prepare to get their inheritance. They had been told that Hugh L. Mosher, acquired by trade in Manchester, Eng., $1,160,000,000 when Manchester had only 14,000 inhabitants, that he and his sons became colonists despite their thousand million dollars, and that after Hugh L. Mosher died, in Rhode Island 238 years ago, the money, which at that time had become mysteriously diminished to the mere bagatelle of $128,000,000, was deposited in the bank of England where it awaits the descendants' call.—Mt. Forest Confid.
