from time immemorable, and has and the same. Already in ancient times the belief prevailed that the moon was inhabited by some higher resembling man, and in order communicate with them the earthly enthusiasts planted rows of trees several miles in length so as to form the figure of the Pythagoreen theoren. The celebrated astronomer, Schroder, in the beginning of the present century, the surface of the moon which periodically grew lighter and darker, and of existing vegetation. During the July. last few decades, however, the idea of life on the moon had been held up to ridicule, and totally scorned by men of learning. But, nevertheless, it has now been proved to be correct.

that the observations of the moon gave but very unsatisfactory results, power of the moon's atmosphere, which is that strong that it effects the correctness of the observation in a very high degree. He then conceived the idea to make the object glass of the refractor less sensitive to the rays of light and for that porpose he darkened it with the smoke of camphor. took months of experimenting before he succeeded in finding his right degree of obscurity of the glass and when finally found he then with the refractor took a very accurate photo of the moon's surface. This he placed in a sun microscope, which gave the The revelation was most startling. It perfectly overturned all hitherto entertained ideas of the moon's surface. Those level plains which were formerly held to be oceans of water proved be verdant fields, and what formerly were considered mountains turned out as deserts of sand and oceans water. Towns and habitations of a kinds were plainly discernible, as well as signs of industry and traffic. The learned professor's study and abserv ations of old Luna will be repeated and we venture to predict-that the time is not far off when we shall know more about the man in the moon than as being an agent in English politics.

Ladies Who Never Buy.

A dry goods salesman says :-- We haveto endure a great deal at the hands of those ladies who never buy. These people take up valuable time, and a good part of our energies is directed to the effort to circumvent them The moment an 'old-timer' comes up to the counter she is instantly recognized by some one of the salesmen. and the warning signal, a tap on the counter, is passed along the line. Then we have some fun. The 'oldtimer' will call for, say, a certain shade of yellow. She is told it is not in stock. 'Oh, what a pity !' she ex. claims, 'that is just what I wanted. If you had it I would buy sixteen yards of it.' Then it is the next man's turn. He comes up accordingly, and teles the first salesman that he is mistaken, that there is still a bolt of twenty yards of that identical stuff in the store. He brings it forward and lays it down. You would think the shopper who never buys would be disconcerted at this turn of affairs. Not a bit of it. She says smilingly; 'Oh, that is just what I want. Lay it saide for me, and I will see my dressmaker and find out just how many yards she needs, and to-morrow I will come back and buy it.' Then she de-Mr. A.
