A Public Nuisance.

We have hitherto refrained from publishing a number of communications respecting the "Slaughter House" at Armstrong's Creek beyond the E. R. Station. It has been a favorite place for the farmers to water their horses; but lately horses refuse to drink the water on account of the noxious stench that pervades the atmosphere, and, perhaps, the water. A gentleman who was coming into town a few evenings ago, informs us that the stench was intolerable. We trust our friends of the establishment will see to the removal of the premises to a locality where it will not inconvenience public comfort.
