CURIOUS MURDFRS IN AFRICA.

How a Magician Killed a Dexan Women at Lagos. The last arriving mail steamer at Liverpool from Africa brought particulars of the trial and sentence of the native Adeoshup for the murder of numerous women Lagos, on the West African coast. The killing of at least a dozen females was laid to the account of Adeoshun, but at the trial, which took place on the 9 h of July, he was charged with the wilful murder of three women, viz., Mrs. Catherine Clegg, Mrs. Selena Cole, and her sister.

The exact number of skeletons found in the bush was twelve, and of these three were identified as the females named, all of whom were natives, and occupied respectable positions in Lagos, two of them being the wives of native merchants. A large number of witnesses were examined, the testimony of one female showing the modus operandi of the prisoner. This witness, whose name was Idown, had a very narrow escape of being one of Adeoshun's victims, Idown went down to Adeoshun's house. He had numerous "charms" spread on the floor, among them being a small mud ilol and several vials filled with powder. Adeoshun had a pistol, which he fired at the idol. He then took something out of the idol, and together with a shilling dropped it into a vessel containing water, making the shilling into two shillings.

Tois was the great power his "charms" possessed of making articles double their or ginal value. He urged Idown to bring him cloth and beads for that purposo, but she said she was not a trader. After this he wanted her to mask her face, and on her refusing blew some of the powder from the vial to the wind, and Idown became somewhat stupefied. She went nome and returned to Adeoshun's house with a sum of £10, together with a quantity of beads and cloth. Adeoshun told her to buy two fowls, two bottles of rum one yard of white Croydon cloth, and two Kola nuts, and meet him at Ikovi road. Ikovi road is near to the place where the skeletons were found. It was 4 o'clock in the morning when the meeting was to take place.

Idown was to tell nobody of the matter or the charms would not act, and the cloth was to be tied round her face. The appointment fortunately was not kept, and three days afterward the prisoner was arrested. The statement of Idown corroborates, for the most part, the supposed plan which the prisoner adopted in carrying out his fiendish object, viz., to blindfold the women, place a fowl in each hand, get them to kneel down, and then despatch them with some heavy weapon. Adeoshun denied the charge of murder, maintained a dignified demeaner in addressing the jury, and told them he was bold and intrepid, having rothing to tear. The jury, however, brought in a verdict of guilty in all three instances, and asked that the prisoner be executed in public if sentenced to be hanged. prisoner was e eatenced to death.

Adeoshua was a native of Porto Navo. and years ago was sold by the authorities to the King of Dahcmey, one of whose ex ecutioners he immediately became. The King of that place was, and no doubt is still, a bloodthirsty ruler, having frequent and fearful human sacrifices. Escaping to Lagos, Adeoshun set up as a conjuror, a fetish priest, medicine man, and a worker of charms, in which capacity his victims visited him, and through which they lost their lives.

The Jews of Roumania.

There is once more a crisis in the position of the Jews of Roumania. The effects of the malevolent ingenuity of the authorities are likely far to exceed in ultimate effect the Russian outrages of two years ago, which aroused the indignation of civilized Europe and excited the generous sympathy of Eng. land. The Jews of Roumania, are, it is true, not maltreated by misguided peasants. But thousands of them have been deprived of their livelihood by a crafty legislative trick, and have no re ource but to become wanderers on the face of the earth. Once more western Jews have to face the problem how to assist these victims of persecution. Already the tide of emigration has begun to flow through Germany. The desired destination of the emigrants is America, but they cannot fulfil the conditions of the immigration laws of the United States, and they find their advance stayed. The experience at Briody in 1882 are likely to be repeated, not in Galicia, but nearer Berlin. The wretched wanderers can neither advance nor retire. The condition of their having obtained emigration passports is that they shall not return to Roumania. Germany and Austria can not and will not retain them. Whither are they to go, and what is to be their fate? Prince Bismarck has given several proofs that he insists upon the B:rlin treaty being observed by the contract. ing powers. Is there any just reason why he should not give a timely hint to Roumania that she must loyally observe to the letter the explicit provisions embodied in the forty-fourth clause of the treaty? Germany has much influence in Roum mia. King Charles is a Hohenzollern Roumanian statesmen look to Germany to protect their country from Muscovite designs. The crown prince has shown his abhorrence of the persecution of the Jews. Here are elements which might be judiciously deals with at once. Every moment is precious. Thousands of Roumanian Jews are being raduced to the condition of beggars. They cannot stay in Roumania and will wander through Austria and Germany, depending in their dire distress upon the charitable assistance of their brethern-in-faith.-Jewish Chronicle.

In Camp at Aldershot My friends, stationed at the camp, reseived me with the frank, generous hospitality of the English officer, and their kind and friendly treatment soon makes me feel thoroughly at home among them, free to come and go as I please, and to make my acquaintance with Tommy Atkins at my here - engineers, artillery "horse, foot, and dragoons," and all the varied types of character in the army are to be met with, from the little drummes boy torn in the service to the hardened noncommissioned officer of a dozn campaigus Magnificent types of the soldier these latter, as they pass through the streets with ringing stride, straight as arrows, neat as 103p and water, pipe-clay and brush, can make them, proud of their position and of their profession, and often exercising fully as much authority over the men under them

Here theatrical perfo muces, often of considerable merit, are frequently given by the men, and the soldiers can always rely upon the generous support of their officers in their amusements. The theatre or music hall at the Royal Ar tillery Burracks is generally well attended almost any evening, and a good "cong and dance" man enjoys no mean degree of pop 1-larity among his co prides. But it in the innate love that all English. mea bear for athletic sports that "Tommy" comes out in his full glory, and his officers do not disdain to mest him on equal grounds at cricket, foot-ball, and other out-door games. Difierent branches of the service frequently n'est in friendly rivalry, and many a match is played on the grounds of the officer's clab between teams of various regiments or corps, selected from among the officers and men, irrespective of their miltary rank. It is not an unusual sight to see a game among the officers "umpired" by some veteran non-commissioned officers, skilled in all the intricacies of the natosal game of cricket.

The most interesting of the purely martial sports-if I can use the word in reference to what forms part of the drill of the cavalry and mounted artillery—are the exciting contests of sabre versus sabre, or sabre versus lance, and the like, when some rival "rough-riders" are pitted against one another. One can easily imagine how the tournaments of old appeared, to see these active fellows, mounted on their fine horses, which seem to sympathiz; with and enter int) the spirit of their riders, as clad in stout leather tunics, their heads protected with strong wire masks, they charge down on one another, cutting, thrusting, and parrying, retreating and pursuing. Hard knocks are given and received with apparent goodhumor, though I doubt not that long habits of discipline restrain many an honest fellow's temper when his blood is up. It is rough but manly worker, and one does not wonder, on seeing what training they go through that the British horsemen are renowned for their courage and dexterity. Another sport in which the nerve and coolness that go so far toward making a good cavalier are displayed to great advantage is tent-pegging, introduced, I believe into the British Army by the native cavalrymen of the Indian service. The player, armed with a light bamboo lance, puts his horse at full gallop over the course, and strikes with his lance head a tent peg protruding a few inches out of the ground, into which one end has been firmly driven. See how firmly yet lightly the soldier sits his horse, body bent forward, lance couched, thundering forward at the top of his horse's speed. Lower down on his charger's neck, a tighter clasp of the legs, nearer and nearer—the exact moment must be rightly chosen—a slight turn of the wrist of the practiced bridle hand-now! crash !- and he swings back upright into ihe saddle, waving the light lance triumph. antly above his head, with the splintered piece of wood transfixed on its iron point.-R. The Italian Peasant. Life beneath an Italian sky is popularly imagined to be a pleasant form of existence. Such, however, does not appear to be invariably the case. The account given by Mr. Beauclerk, in a report to the toreign office on the agricultural condition of Italy, of peasant life in Piedmont is not of a glowing character. Day-laborers who possess no thing are, he states, the majority of the inhabitants; they amount in Piedmont to onefifth of the rural population. The landlords are habitually absentees, taking no interest whatever in their tenants, in return for which they have excluded almost every man of means from the list of councillors at the communal elections. The townspeople deride and despise country folk, and are looked upon by them as proud and selfish. In Novara the farm-lab rer is said "to contend with every species of privation from the cradle to the grave." His infancy is passed in the care of strangers or rolling in the mud; at 7 years old he receives a few months per year of elementary schooling, and passes the remainder in tending goats; at 10 he already gains some small wages; at 12 he sleeps away from home, and is regularly em ployed; and at 15 he undertakes the hardest narm work. The men rise in summer at 2 a.m., in winter at 4 a.m., awakened by beating a stick on an empty box; in the former season they work from twelve to fifteen hours per day. When ill the hospital receives them; when old and unfit for work they are forsaken and uncared for; yet the peasants seldom take to begging, even when deprived of all resources. Girls take part in field work at the age of 14 or 15 At night they catch frogs and fish in the marshes. At 30 they are matured women, old at 40, decrepit at 50, with bent backs and bronzed faces. Many families lead a nomadic life. Every Michaelmas their household goods, worth perhaps a total of £6, are packed on a bullock cart, and a new home or situation is sought. In the hill regions many of the villages are notable for their excessive filth. Throughout the plains masters and workmen live together for years without the change of a syllable of good will. In every hamlet class distinctions are complete down the entire gamut of the social scale. Laborers usually have many children, "and," says the report of the Italian government commission that has been recently inquiring into their condition, "in-
