The Alis in with ... The ancient Romans, says 1.0fesso:

H. Nissen, of Strasburg, saw in the A.p. a kind of wall completely southing them out from the people living b your ween, and so for centuries they hesitated to take possession of the mountain-lands, although their legions had subjected all the country at the base of the Alps to the Rhine, and had made demonstrations toward Germany and England. So great was their dread of these unknown heights that they quietly endured the andacity of the rapacious tribes inhabiting them till about fifteen years B. C. Yet Hannibal had crossed them for the first time in September of 218 B. C. This was considered a deed of such magnitude that its success was ascribed by the southern people to the assistance of the heavenly powers. The darkness that rested over the Alps was first illuminated by the historian Polybius, who visited them and described them from his own observations. Roman power was extended over them by Augustus Casar, B. C. 15. Afterward roads were built over them, fourteen at least, the laying out of which shows that they were made after careful studies of the situation by the engineers. The opening of the mountains to travel was followed by a great streaming of adventurers in search of the riches to be found in the regions beyond, and scenes were enacted very much like those which were witnessed a few years ago in California. At one time gold was found in such abundance that the price of the metal was depreciated thirty-four per cent. through all Italy. The treasure hunters carried vines with them and planted them wherever they settled down; and to this, in part, Germany owes its weaith in vineyards. The forests were laid waste as a matter of course, just as they are now wherever a new settlement is planted, and with similar results. The Romans had no appreciation of the beauty and grandeur of the mountains, so highly admired by modern taste, but expressed only dread of them and abhorrence of their savage aspect, which they considered weil represented in the barbarous names their indwellers gave to them. They entertained the wildest ideas of the height of | confirmed. the mountains, which they exaggerated tremendously. Pliny, who was a native of Como, at their very foot, speaks of an auditor. one of the peaks as being fifty miles Bianc.

The Horses of the Great Desert.

The Arabs of Sahara are very particular as to the color of their horses. White is the color for princes, but does not stand heat. The black brings good fortune, but fears rocky ground. The chestnut is the most active. If one tells you that he has seen a horse fly in the air, ask of what color it was; if he replies "chestnut," believe him. In a combat against a chestnut you must have a chestnut. The bay is the hardest and most sober. If one tells you that a horse has leaped to the bottom of a precipice without hurting himself, ask of what color he was, and if he replies "bay," believe him. Ben Dyab, a renowned chief of the desert, happening one day to be pursued by Saad-el-Zenaty, turned to his son and asked:

"What horses are in the front of the enemy ?"

enemy?"

"White horses," replied the son. "It is well; let us make for the sunny side and they will melt away like butter.' Some time afterward Ben Dyab again turned to his son and said: "What horses are in the front of the "Black horses," cried his son.

"It is well; let'us make for stony ground and we shall have nothing to fear; they are the negroes of the Soudan, who cannot walk with bare feet upon the flints."

He changed his course and the black horses were speedily distanced. A third time Ben Dyab asked:

"And now what horses are in front of the enemy?"

"Dark chestnuts and dark bays." "In that case," said Ben Dyab, "strike out, my children, strike out, and give your horses the heel, for these might perchance overtake us had we not given barley to ours all the summer through."

Montreal's Great Carnival.

One of the most noticeable features of the Montreal Winter Carnival is a magnificent special "Carnival Number," issued by Messrs. John Dougall & Son, of the Montreal Witness. The publishers have pressed into service the most talented Canadian artists: and, consequently, the result has never been equalled in Canada. The number fairly teems with illustrations, and has a gigantic four-page picture-"Storming of the Ice Castle by Night" -designed by Mr. Robert Harris, A. R. C. A. Besides this there are full: page pictures by Messrs. Harington Bird, Raphael, Walker, and other leading artists, and the number also contains the Carnival Poem, appropriately, illustrated, for which a prize of $100 has been paid, and a special Suppliment re-presenting the various athletic clubs and their leading men. The letterpress pages have been tastefully prepared, and contain, a, very large number of engrayings, representing various phases of our Canadian winter sports. The price of this gorgeous number is but ten cents per copy, postpaid. Orders; are, filled strictly in the rotation in which they are received by John Dougall & Son. "Witness" Office, Montreal.
