Army came to Markdale, I believe they have succee led in doing some good, and I trust they may continue so, as is much nee led here. But on the other hand, when the influence has seen withdrawn will the parties who re or pretend to be saved, continue in he ways of the Lord, or will they drift lack to their former life? This I conader a serious question, and people should think well before being influeuced by excitement Among the conserts, I notice a few who Lever enter s church door; one who claims not to lave been in a church tor over ten rears. I think the ministers are to hame here. Why did they not visit and pray with him, and try to persuade that erring brother to attend church, of the churches had a claim on him? There is much to be done in Markdale, and I would advise the ministers to be up and doing. The Captain of the Army, who. I see, is visiting and exdoing now what the ministers ought to have done long ago, and although le will meet with little encouragement from some, he will be the means of bringing others to the feet of Christ. I | 243.45. know he has no desire to see any person go forward unless they think calmly and seriously of the step they are about to take. Am afraid such is von hear people say that they never get any good in the churches, and then, after attending a few of the Army meetings, they go forward, and on the following night, they stand up and tell the audience that they have been saved, and are sure of it. Is this consistent with the true Christian tians should do all they possibly can to help on with the work of our Saviour, by showing their faith in Christ and working heart and soul for nim, instead of grumbling and trying to keep others back in that great work. It would be better if the church had never seen such hypocrites. Then they have the cheek to tell you it's the
