and an altar occupy their original position in the innermost chamber, and are in perfect condition. The sculptures are very curious, and the aspect of the whole tomb is reported as extremely archaic. From the second to the end of the eleventh dynasty there were, however, many kings named Neferkara; and until the inscriptions are fully deciphered it is impossible to say under which ruler this lame functionary flourished. The tomb is attributed by those on the spot to the third dynasty; but it seems for many reasons more likely to date from the time of that Neferkara who succeeded Merenra of the sixth dynasty. The founder of this line, Atl, was a native of the island of Elephantine, opposite Assuan, and the place first rose to importance under his successors. It was during the reign of Merenra that Una, a famous General and Prime Minister, quarried the granite of Assuan for the sepulchre and sarcophagus of his sovereign, and built a fleet of thirteen vessels at Elephantine for the transport of the same. Pending further details, we should therefore be inclined to ascribe the large tomb to a gentleman of that period, especially if the neighboring twelfth dynasty tombs are those of his descendants. In one of these latter there were found a series of Osiride statues, representing the deceased in mummified form, done in baked clay or terra cotta, and placed in recesses along the corridor. This, at all events, is an entire novelty in tomb decoration. The cemetery will probably prove to be of great extent, as there is evidence of its having been in use down to a late period. The large tomb, usurped by later owners, was found piled to the ceiling with mummies, mummy cases, and funerary furniture of Roman times, including upward of sixty memorial stelae. Gen. Grenfell is actively pursuing his work of discovery by the help of our English soldiers, who continue to open and clear out tomb after tomb.

OVER THE OCEAN.

The eldest son of the Shah of Persia is making a tour through Europe. Mr. Broadhurst, M. P., as a mason, actually helped to build the Home Office, where he is now second in command as under home secretary. According to the London Practical Confectioner "the potato introduced in England in 1600 was first eaten as a sweetmeat, stewed in sack wine and sugar. The recent census in Bavaria has brought to light the following terse, though somewhat lengthy title: "A—B—, Royal Bavarian Railroad construction section fire-wood storehousekeeper." Mr. Arch appeared at the recent Parliamentary banquet given in his honor in a pepper-and-salt suit and scarlet tie. He sat beside Mr. Chamberlain, who was in full evening dress. Poor Lord Bute, having spent £1,000,000 on his new house, can only afford to give 1-5,000 of that sum to the widows and orphans of the colliers who were killed while lately working for him. A diamond, larger and more valuable than the Koh-i-Noor, is about to arrive from the Cape. The lapidary has been engaged eighteen months in cutting the gem. The Koh-i-Noor is said to be worth $140,000. In 1799 the Parliament of Great Britain had to transact the business, so far as home affairs were concerned, of about 12,000,000 people; to-day of about 35,000,000, and the affairs of Ireland (then transacted in Dublin) absorb about three-fourths of time, so that pressing English business has to stand over. Dr. Phipson, in a German scientific journal, advocates the general use of sugar as an article of diet, not simple as a pleasing addition to food. He affirms that during forty years he has eaten at least a quarter of a pound of sugar daily, not counting sugar-forming substances taken at the same time, and has been benefited by it. No Russian lady can travel without her husband's consent to the issue of her passport, but in Austria woman's right to a veto has just been recognized. It is stated that a decree has recently been promulgated to the effect that no married Austrian subject shall henceforth receive a passport for journeying beyond the frontier, without the express consent of his wife. Prince Krapotkin, the "Citizen Prince," as he is now affectionately called by the Socialists, is a studious-looking man of middle age, with a bald head and Shakespearean nose, and wears a seal skin cap and spectacles. He speaks English with scholarly correctness and French with vernacular fluency. His ideal of government is what he terms anarchical communism. The huge, drastic, gripping, sickening pills are fast being superseded by Dr. Pierce's "Purgative Pellets." Sold by druggists. The new cotton goods are as handsome as India silks. Young or middle-aged men suffering from nervous debility or other delicate diseases, however induced, speedily and permanently cured. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association Buffalo, N. Y. Trucks are revolved on spring frocks. "The light that lies, In woman's eyes," is a ray of heaven's own brightness; but it is, alas! often dimmed or quenched by some wearing, disease, perhaps silently borne, but taking all comfort and enjoyment out of life. That light of the household can be re-kindled and made to glow with its natural brightness. Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" is a potent specific for most of the chronic weaknesses and diseases peculiar to women. M. Gaston Tessandier's "La Nature" has just entered upon its fourteenth volume with a subscription list of 15,000.
