A NEVER-THING WORK.—To say that an advertisement is never read is the most absurd mistake made by a business man. It is a never-thing worker in the interest of the employer. When the bill distributor has disappeared from the streets, and the bills are trampled into pulp, the advertisements is performing its silent mission to family circles. It appears to a constituency five or six times larger than the actual sale of the paper for there are few newspapers that do not pass from hand to hand among a half dozen persons with every issue.
