A young man of West Waw.nosh named Oliver Ferrier, returning home from a neighbor's house, a mile distant from his own home, one stormy night recently, became dazed and blinded by the storm, wandered in the wrong direction, and four days afterward was found dead in an orchard five miles from his parents' residence.

The ladies of the Kingston Medical College lately had fun over the high tile of one of the eminent professors. One asks another, "Why does Prof .- wear a plug hat ?" and then they go off into a corner and tee-he and tee-haw over the answer as though they were not aware that this world is "a vast cavern of suffering." Do you know the answer ? No. Well, he wears it "to cover his head."

work in her, especially at night. Queer noises were heard in the cabin of the vessel last week, which no one could explain, and the men believe the vessel is haunted. There seems to be some tatality about her. When the Squando was in San Francisco some vears ago, the captain and his wife killed the first mate, severing his head completely from the body with an axe. The captain was hanged, and his wife got a long sentence of imprisonment. The new captain was subsequently killed during a mutiny, and the two following captains died on board the vessel. It was alleged by the master and sailors who arrived at Bathurst on her that she was haunted, and they left in a body. The Norwegian Consul then engaged To average humanity such opportunities two watchmen to look after her, but one night on board was enough. They allege that they saw a headless man walking in the cabin, that the bedclothes were pulled off them, that hand-spikes were flying around the deck, and that a cold, clammy hand was laid on their faces, and a voice told them to depart; and subsequent watchmen say that they saw a boat manned by four men hovering around the ship, which had the power of appearing and disappearing at will. The vessel is now without a watchman, as none can be found to stay on board during the night. The Minister of Customs has ordered an investigation into the cause of the

Mr. Perkins's Message.

A colored man came into a telegraph oftice, and shuffling his way up to the operator's window, asked: . "Kin I send a telegraft f'm here to my wife out in Hollyhock?" "Certainly," said the operator. "Can von write?"

"Sartain, sah!" "Well, here is a blank; write your message on that." The colored man wrote slowly and painfully for some time, and then handed the message to the operator. "Kin yer read dat writing,' sah?" he

"Oh, yes," said the operator; "I can make it out." And he read aloud, slowly :

"To MARTHA JANE PERKINS, HOLLYHOCK : Train-done-disconnected ;-home-two-A. M.-to-morrow-evenin', GEORGE WASHINGTON PERKINS."

"You kin read it?" exclaimed Mr. Perkins. "Now gub it back to me jist one minute."

He took the message, brushed his thumb across the inky space around the ink-bottle, and then pressed the thumb vigorously ga n t the surface of the paper.

"Here! What in the world did you do that for?" asked the operator. "Ha! ha! Don't you worry bout dat," said Mr. Perkins; "when my Martha Jane see dat great big fumb dar on dis message, she know dat it was me dat sent it, shuah!

But we all know here that the Dominion Government is anxious to see British regulars once more in their Toronto and London. The opening of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the proposed new fortifications in British Columbia, the possibility of the Suez canal being closed to the Mr. William Baillie, editor of The Calgary British fleet, the danger of a Russian invasion of India, the half-wished-for hope of imperial federation among so many people in Great Britain and Canada, all point to on his legs when addressing the North-west the probability of garrisoning Canada Gilbert Craig, of St. John, N. Among Canadian regular officers of British origin there is, too, a marked desire to put on the mannerisms and affect the accent of Englishmen, while among business men the return of imperial troops would be accepted as a stimulus to trade, while society people would rejoice to see the red coats once more.

Haste and Waste.

The anecdote which follows deserves to be placed beside the well-known story of the lad who won a place in a bank by stooping to pick up a pin which he found on the floor of the president's room:

One story of the eccentric Setphen Girard says that he once tested the quality of a boy who applied for a situation by giving him a match loaded at both ends and ordering L him to light it. The boy struck the match, A singular story comes from Bathurst, and after it had burned half its length, threw N.B., where the ship Squando was lately it away. Girard dismissed him, because he wrecked. It is very difficult to get men to did not save the other end for future use. The boy's failure to notice that the match was a double-ended one was natural enough, considering how matches are generally made; but haste and heedlessness (a habit of careless observation) are responsible for a great part of the waste of property in the world.

Heroism

There is a general impression that, whatever characteristics may come to be prevalent, Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halithat of heroism must always remain exc :p- fax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly durtional. It is usually associated in the mind ing summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow with prominent deeds that win universal applause, or great sacrifices that involve endurance of pain or renunciation of pleasure. seldom come, and it is therefore supposed it is quite clear that these circumstances cannot create the heroism; they can only call Allan Portland, Boston Montreal it forth if it is there; and, if this be so, it must exist independent of circumstances. It is true that the heroic element in a man will enable him to do great deeds and endure great suffering if need be; but, when he is not called upon for these, he does not cease to be a hero. On the other hand, the same actions may be performed and sacrifices | Total Assets, made without any heroism at all. It is the character that lies underneath that is heroic | Company's Buildings, Toronto St., Toronto. or unheroic.

Barnum Knows.

A few words of wisdom were dropped by P. T. Barnum some days ago, when addressing the merchants of Bridgeport, which all business men should ponder. Said he: "You do not, any of you, advertise enough. A newspaper advertisement may seldom be read, still it makes the name and the business of the man familiar and its presence in the columns of a paper inspires confidence in the stability of the enterprise." None ever advertised more liberally than the speaker, and few have reaped a more liberal return for it. Judicious and liberal advertising always pays a large interest.

Enough of a Good Thing.

"Papa, just see my new dress," said a young society girl as she presented herself attired for her first grand ball. "Isn't it too sweet for anything?"

"Does it suit you, my dear?" " I just dote on it."

"If that is so, I should think that you would have had more of it," said paterfamilias, after taking a sharp glance at the decollete costume.
