MARKDALE, JULY 5, 1888

DOMINION DAY.

The 1st of July falling on Sunday, the following day was observed as a holiday, and as there was no public celebration at home our citizens betook themselves in companies of from two to a score or more bent on a day's jollification and went in various directions, leaving the village sadly deserted. The weather was delightful, tho' the roads were very dusty, and the outing was doubtless much enjoyed by each and all.

A very pleasant and sociable day was spent by a happy company at Bell's Lake. There was Irish enough in the party to supply wit; youth to give it vivacity and age to season with gravity. When Markdale assumes civic proportions, when a few of nature's freaks are overcome by art, when the mosquitoes and sun-fish refuse to bite, Bell's Lake will undoubtedly become our pleasure resort. The short drive, too, over the corduroy, to a philosopher, has its bright side; our John, however, though one horse did get there a few minutes before the other one did, was remarkably skilful with the reins; he accomplished the feat of throwing the rig around on the road without requiring the fence to be removed. If his friends wish any further information respecting his abilities in this line we respectfully refer them to the Reeve. The day was however thoroughly enjoyed in cruising about the lake in Moffat's pleasure yacht.

A goodly number attended the picnic under the auspices of the I. O. G. T. to Kimberley. For real gorgeous sight-seeing in the shape of mountain and glen, landscape and rocks, this district is unsurpassed if equalled in Ontario. The company had a pleasant drive, ate a hearty picnic dinner in a beautiful grove in the suburbs of this romantic and cozy village, after which nearly all struck out for the top of the rock on the east which is about one and a half miles distant and five hundred feet higher than the bed of the river at Kimberley. After an hour and a half exhaustive toil climbing over craggy rocks, through thick and brushy forest, and battling with the myriads of mosquitoes the ascent was accomplished and the summit reached; here the fatigued pleasure-seekers were more than rewarded for their pains on reaching the pinnacle in the grandeur of the scenery. The valley winding about north and south with farm houses, cultivated fields and an occasional piece of wooded land, the mountain side clothed in rich foliage, the blue waters of the Georgian Bay on the north-east and the precipice in front, being a perpendicular descent of several hundred feet; altogether the view was enchanting, invigorating and elevating to the mind. The party returned home safe and sound, weary and yet pleased with their day's experiences to dream the following night of the wonders and beauties of the works of nature.

Another jovial company took in Eugenia, and we are informed they too were successful in having their cup of enjoyment filled to the brim. Their trip is said to have abounded with amusing and interesting incidents quite too numerous to mention. Their gratification was satisfied in the thrilling views of landscape mountain and glen as seen from the mountain at Kimberley and also the renowned Eugenia Falls. The home trip was made pleasant and amusing by the antics of certain members of the company, all returning pleased with their trip and glad they had gone.

Still another, and one of the jolliest of the lot, was the young people who picniced in McDuffie's grove adjoining the village. This was given out of respect for visiting acquaintances from Toronto. They also had an exceedingly sociable and enjoyable day.

Another loud went to the Sauble where a celebration was in progress. We understand they also returned the same day right end up with care.

There may have been other picnics but if so we have been unable to ascertain. The day concluded with a grand garden party in the spacious grounds under the auspices of the Church of England. This was largely attended, the management most commendable and a very enjoyable time spent throughout. The weather was all that could be desired, the catches in abundance and of a fine quality, the refreshments excellent and the waiters experts at the business. The brass band enlivened proceedings by selections, and altogether it was one of the best garden parties yet given. Proceeds $89.40.

CANADA ATTAINS HER MAJORITY.

We ought to be proud of our country. It is great in extent, rich in natural resources, attractive to the immigrant, inhabited by a free, a happy and a prosperous people. We touch three oceans and border on a great and mighty nation that is well disposed towards us, and equally interested with us in the maintenance of peace on this continent, the avoidance of war and the support of an army and navy for police purposes only. Europe is a vast armed camp: every man a soldier; women forced to do the work in the field while the husband and son are wasting their time and energy in barracks and on parade grounds. We do not always appreciate the blessing, the inestimable blessing of peace like that which reigns throughout America. We have good laws, well administered. Our courts are pure and on the whole just in their verdicts. Religion is free and opinion untrammelled. Our climate is wholesome and conducive to the growth of a healthy, thrifty and hardy race. Science and invention are fast overcoming our natural difficulties: our winters are growing less severe, or rather we are acquiring means and methods that are steadily reducing their severity; good roads, railways everywhere; splendid canals and a creditable inland marine. Look at our whole system of education colleges for the training of our doctors, ministers, teachers, druggists, schools of art, of veterinary science, of agriculture. Most of these things obtained within the past twenty-one years, within the memory of all. What shall it be twenty-one years hence? Greater by far than you or I dare prophesy. We shall be mighty, prosperous, and let us hope most of all strong in what constitutes true national greatness.

Do you then as Canadians young and old, man and woman, think well of this our country. Teach your children to honor their own country, to be proud of it, to maintain its freedom, its privileges and its good name. Teach them that there is no land like our land and no skies like ours. Teach them to be true to their country and proud that they are Canadians.

And if we ought to think well of our country we ought still more to think well of our forefathers from whom we derived all the blessings of peace and good government that we enjoy, and who gained in one generation and another all these glorious rights and privileges that we hold dear. We venerate the memory of our forefathers who in the old land struggled for us and bequeathed us a heritage of freedom, a wealth of literature, and traditions that are the glory of us all. We can never repay them for what they have done for us. But we can at least hand down the trust we got from them to our children unimpaired, and let us hope somewhat improved. And if we pay a word of respect to the memory of our ancestors across sea, whether English, Irish or Scotch, still more ought we to venerate the memory of our forefathers who came a weary voyage across the ocean, toiled up the St. Lawrence, or came long distances from the colonies to the south of us, and, taking their way through the wilderness, settled in the bush cleared the land, built houses for themselves, started their little churches, and their schools and finally left us the smiling country that we see around us. And not only did they clear the land for us, but they secured and vindicated for us and for ourselves great political privileges. They now lie at rest beneath the sod: the graves of many of them we do not even know; but their work is an imperishable monument, and as times lengthens so will their renown, and poets yet unborn will sing the glories and the peaceful deeds of our first settlers and their settlements.

And if we ought to be proud of our country and venerate the memory of our ancestors, we ought also to respect, to cherish, our women. We cannot do too much for our wives, our daughters and our mothers. They are, perhaps, the weaker sex; but as someone has finely observed, they are the frail vessels that bear the stream of humanity from generation to generation. At the present moment we have a noble example of our womanhood before the eyes of the whole world in the person of the Empress Victoria, just bereaved of her husband, the Emperor Frederick. She has figured before the world as an incessant worker for the improvement of her sex, for the diffusion of art and knowledge among the poor, as a model mother, most of all as a devoted wife. But it is not in palaces only that our noble women are to be found. Wherever English is spoken you will find noble type of womanhood, and there is no measure of real standing as a nation so safe and true as that of its treatment of women. Honor your women, lessen their burdens, love them, cherish them. And lastly, everyone thinks well of his calling whatever it may be. Here in Canada most of us are farmers. Let us do what we can to improve the condition of the farmer. Much has been done: much still remains to be accomplished. Much of the drudgery of the farm has been abolished; more has yet got to go the same road. And then in our city and town life there is room for improvement in many directions. If we were all engaged in our individual calling we would be an earnest nation.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The rival editors of Mitchell had the other committed to libel. One funny thing about the article headed "Brotherly Love" is that man's newspaper work cannot get satisfaction they want out of columns without setting an example of going to law. No man can be greatly injured in a competition where he is well known by any paper statement, unless it is true.—The Republican candidate for position of President of the States is general Benjamin Harrison of North Bent, Ohio, a grand General William Henry Harrison was elected President in 1841. He was a soldier and statesman of considerable renown. He is descended from the followers of Oliver Cromwell, one of his grandfathers having participated in the trial of Charles I. having signed the death warrant of that monarch, for which he was afterwards hanged. The President is a man of considerable ability, statesman, an elder in the Presbyterian church and a Sunday school teacher. The candidates for the presidency is Levi P. Morton, who succeeded from George Morton, the Puritan fathers, and is a descendant of the late Rev Daniel Morton of Vermont. He is a member of the House of Morton, Bliss & Norton.

Standard Correspondence.
At the last regular meeting of the Royal Templars of Temperance in this village the subject of having a meeting at this Lodge at the Prohibition convention to be held in Montreal this week was discussed when the Rev. J. W. Shilton of this village was unanimously elected to press the gains and causes of the Prohibition at that great convention. The Royals here are to be congratulated on having such a number well equipped thoroughly conversant to discuss the vital question of the day for their representation found in the person of H. Shilton. He left here for Montreal by the early train on Monday last.

The anniversary services of the Presbyterian church here were conducted in the Presbyterian church next Sabbath. The church has been fortunate in securing the service of the Rev. W. A. Hunter, of Orangeville who has been called to the pastorate of the John Smith's church in Erskineville, Toronto. Mr. Hunter will preach at 11 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. On the eve of departure a meeting of John Gordon Esq. has been a very active worker in the cause of Temperance in connection with the Royal Templars here, at the meeting of Templars on Tuesday last Mr. Gordon was with a very kindly word and purse in token of esteem and good will of his brothers here.

Two of our townsmen Richard and J. Blackburn attended the meeting of the masonic craft held last week.

Miss Gordon, Miss Gair, Richardson and others of the Owen Sound on Monday last.

Dominion Day passed but pleasantly in our village evening a very pleasant and garden party under the auspices of the Ladies Aid (Methodist) beautiful grounds surrounding Armstrong's palatial dwelling Torrington and Aikenhead. The evening's entertainment was given by the Ladies Aid. The evening's entertainment was apparently enjoyed by all. Mr. W. Irwin, our principal, is absent this week. He has been engaged as examiner in the examination held in Durham. In his absence Mr. Irwin will take charge of the school.
