in this immense city (says a Bombay aper) teeming with life in every varied irase, gaming obtains in almost every convable form, from the aristocratic betting the lottery room to the vulgar three-card or chuck-farthing of the bazzars. faere is, however, one particular mode of mediation which helps to dissipate the that holds possession of a large porion of the native population during the norsoon season, and proves besides a repagerative source of employment to memers of that astute class of people populary 120wn as shroffs. It is the sutta-anglice ain speculation. The Eutta is one of the implest forms of gambling in existence There is little or no field for sharpers and sindred species; the chance of a gambler winking or losing his money depends solely on his powers of prognostication. There are no instruments employed which admit of any manipulation by practised hands to the detriment of the novice, and the transaction cannot be sold by a dishonest agent. The sutta saloon, the only recognized one in Bombay, is, as it happens, located in close proximity to the Pydhonie police sta-

It is easy of access, and there is no attempt made to hide anything from the police or from any body else. On entering the room, the first object which strikes the eye is an oblong stall running from end to end, dividing the room into two compartments. This stall, as well as two others which lie against the side of either wall of the shed, is occupied by a number of bookthe way, all disputes between the plunger and the shroff are referred. His decision, like the umpire's in cricket, is final.

The appliances, or rather implements, of gaming are of a very simple description. They consit of two rain gauges of somewhat different construction. The Oil Glands.

Nearly two and a half millions of sweat glands pour out upon the surface of the body a watery fluid, which aids in keeping the skin soft, and, by its evaporation, in regulating the bodily temperature.

Beside these sweat glands, the skin contains the so called sebaceous glands, that exude an opaque and oily matter. The ducts convey it either directly to the surface, or into the upper portion of the hair follicles-

the cavities from which the hair proceeds. The oil is designed to help keep the skin supple, and especially to promote the softness of the hair. These glands are absent from the under part of the feet and hands, and are most abundant in the scalp, face, canal of the ear, and about the nose and mouth. Those in the ear secrete the ear-wax. An excess in the secretion renders the face shiny; a deficiency renders the skin and hair dry and harsh. The glands are sometimes obstructed, when the oil becomes thick, or when there is a neglect of cleanliness. This gives rise to papulæ, or pimples, which, on being pressed out through the narrow mouth of the oil duct, resemble worms, or grubs. They are frequently called worms, naturally enough, since the hardened dirt on the outer end looks like a head; but they are only thickened oil, though occasionally a minute living worm chooses one of them for his

Occasionally the more fluid elements of the oil are absorbed, leaving only the solid, and these harden into cutaneous calculi. the obstructed secretions—yellow, half liquid and half solid, like putty or mortar-may form small tumors on the eyebrows, face, neck and head. They should be cut out when small, or destroyed with caustic.

Pain banished as if by magic. Polson's Nerviline is a positive and almost instantaneous remedy for external, internal, or local pains. The most active remedy hitherto known falls far short of Nerviline for potent power in the relief of nerve pain. Buy a 10 cent sample bottle. Large bottles 25 cents, at all

Still, their only harm is in the deformity

The various forms of ache, or pimple, are due to inflammations of these glands. They occur mainly at the period of puberty, and in the years immediately following, and are regarded as due to the constitutional changes then in process. There is at that period a languid and torpid condition of the skin, a tendency to the accumulation of sebaceous matter, and a congestion of the coats of the follicles.

The treatment consists in removing any exciting cause that may exist, improving the nutritive power of the skin and the general system, and stimulating the parts affected. There should also be close attention to diet and habits of life.

One Touch of Nature.

Two or three months ago several thousand Zulus rebelled against their British conquerors and swept across a part of the country, laying waste the homes of all who would not join them. A large number of loyal Zulus took refuge in a police fort at Nwande, to which the insurgents at once laid siege, and Gen. Smyth sent a flying column composed of the Enniskillen Dragoons and the thirteenth Hussars to relieve the beleagured peo-The cavalry soon dispersed the rebels, and as they had orders to abandon the station, they escorted the poor fugitives to a place of safety.

"Taken In."

"I used often to read the newspapers aloud to my wife," said Bert Robinson, "and once I was fairly taken in by a patent medicine advertisement. The seductive paragraph began with a modest account of the sea-serpent, but ended with setting fourth the virtues of a certain Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which, it was alleged, was a sure cure for all throat and lung troubles and would even cure consumption, if taken in time. The way I was taken in, was this; I had a lung trouble and I bought a bottle of the remedy. was a stranger to it and it took me in-and cured me.
