Waterbury, Me.—The feature of the day at the closing exercises of Colby University yesterday was an oration delivered by Benjamin F. Butler on the possibility, probability and advantages of the annexation of Canada. In the course of his address the veteran orator said:—
 The British possession in North America which the Dominion of Canada holds within its boundaries have an area of 3,470,892 square miles, while the United States—not including Alaska of which the limits are unknown—has an area of 2,970,000 square miles, or rising 500,000 square miles less than Canada, and her surrounding water contains quite one half of all the fresh water of the globe. Please bear this great fact in mind, for I repeat it is a foundation of the resources to make one of the greatest nations on earth.
 Canada had quite one-quarter more land fitted for wheat cultivation than has the whole United States. The average production of wheat per acre in the United States in the year 1887 was a little over 12 bushels, while in the same year in Manitoba, where we hardly realize there is ought to support life, the yield was 12,500,000 bushels, at an average of 27 bushels to the acre.
 You may ask and I will turn aside from the thread of my discussion, "Why should the land be better wheat-producing lands than those of the United States?" Because the climate is colder in the winter and hotter in the summer. I will add that Canada has more timber of every possible description than herself and the United States can need in 100 years. She has more iron and coal in her borders than any other country yet known in the world. She has more copper than any other country, if not all others. The northern shore of Lake Superior are more capable of the production of that metal than the southern.
 The climatic advantages of Canada are that it is cold enough to compel everybody to work in order to live, and the land is fertile enough to give every man abundant returns for his labor. Hence results the wealth of the nation and the enterprise of its people.
 Mr. Butler's scheme for Annexation was set forth as follows:
 Negotiations should be approached with a view of uniting the two adjacent English speaking peoples lying side by side in America, in the same commercial and business conditions between each other, with or without a zollverein as may be determined, leaving Great Britain, whose institutions depend upon the same constitutional provisions, and whose laws of freedom give equal protection to their several peoples, later on when her interests of safety demands, to come into like compact with the United States and Canada, a league against the world if any part of the world should see fit to take a stand, which none would or could successfully do.

 Minutes of meeting held Dec. 2, 1889, in Presbyterian church. After the usual services the Rev. Mr. Moorhouse was appointed chairman. The following officers were then elected:
 Rev. W. A. Graham, President.
 Vice-Pres.—Rev. Geo. Buggin, Rev. L. C. Emes, Rev. Mr. Fydel.
 Committee—Geo. Richardson, J. E. Wright, W. A. Brown, Thos. Boland, A. McFarland, R. D. Biggar, John Lyons, John Cassar, C. W. Rutledge, J. R. Graham.
 Collectors—Mrs. Lund, Miss Lackey, Miss Kells, Miss Byers, Miss McKee, Miss Ford, Miss Moffat, Miss Struthers, Miss Taylor.
 The Treasurer's and Depositor's reports were read and adopted, and Mr. W. Turner and Henry Hamilton were appointed Auditors for 1890.

Five Ways to Stop a Cold.
 1. Bathe the feet in hot water and drink a pint of hot lemonade. Then sponge with salt water and remain in a warm room. 2. Bathe the face in very hot water every five minutes for an hour. 3. Snuff up the nostrils hot salt water every three hours. 4. Inhale ammonia or menthol. 5. Take four hours' active exercise in the open air. A 10 grain dose of quinine will usually break up a cold in the beginning. Anything that will set the blood actively in circulation will do it, whether it be drugs or the force of a bucket. But better than all, if your cold is inveterate or serious, consult your family physician, and at once

The Girl that Helps Her Mother.
 The girl I love to think about
 Far more than any other,
 Is thoughtful, helpful, in and out,
 The girl that helps her mother.
 Though plainly dressed, yet always neat,
 And never in a bother,
 But wisely plys head, hands and feet—
 The girl that helps her mother.
 No ignorant, uppish, empty pride,
 With whom no one would bother,
 But genial, jovial, active, shrewd—
 The girl that helps her mother.
 She cleans, or cooks, or makes, or mends,
 And cheerfully does either;
 And tidies up all odds and ends—
 The girl that helps her mother.
 She does not dress up like a flirt,
 To gad and gossip gayer;
 Yet ever socially acts her part—
 The girl that helps her mother.
 Home interests most engage her time,
 For parent, sister, brother,
 She thereby saving many a dime—
 The girl that helps her mother.
 Thrice happy he who such has won,
 To love through life together,
 For eye on her's God's benison—
 The girl that helps her mother.
 Toronto, Sept., 1887. —DALL.

Kisses.
 He went into a baker's shop,
 A bashful youth was he,
 "How much are kisses, please," he said,
 And blushed perceptibly.
 "They're twenty cents a dozen, sir,"
 The maid said smilingly,
 "But if you want them very much,
 I'd let you have some free."
 "I didn't mean that kind," he said,
 His cheek still redder grew,
 "But if you want to throw them in,
 I'll take some of them, too."
 —Kate Record.

An Editor's Mistake.
 An editor of a country paper should never make mistakes; they are quite inexcusable in as much as he has plenty of time to consider, and reconsider all his work; all he has to do anyway is to read proofs, correct errors, write locals, look after personals, read exchanges and clip from them, write adv's for business men, make page, address wrappers, fold papers, clean rollers, re-write communications and correspondence, mail papers and letters, talk to callers, report meetings, puff entertainments, take subscriptions, look pleasant when an offended subscriber orders his paper stopped and says it's not worth a $ anyhow, look after the markets, clean lamps, split wood, keep on fires and other such trifling odds and ends. There's no occasion to make mistakes whatever, and our readers are not expected to exercise any forbearance or charity on those lines. What are we here for?

Sheehy's Trial.
 The trial of Geo. Sheehy, proprietor of the Central Hotel, who was remanded from Thursday of last week on the charge of committing rape on one of the domestics, appeared before the Police Magistrate on Tuesday. The proceedings were held with closed doors, only the witnesses and two or three others besides the solicitors and the constables being present. Sheehy elected to be tried by a jury and only enough evidence was taken to send him up to the Assizes. The evidence is of a revolting nature and shows the prisoner to be a depraved character. On the way to the goal he begged the police to allow him the privilege to take his dinner with his family. This was very reluctantly granted. In the unguarded moment he dashed out of the back door and jumped into a livery rig which was waiting for him, and drove away before the police could catch him. Chief McAuley hurriedly procured a conveyance and with P. C. Herron followed in hot pursuit. Sheehy drove out on the St. Vincent road until he reached the top of Keelings' rock where he turned and tied his horse to a telegraph pole and jumped out and tramped through the bush and fields until he reached the railway track at Rockford after dark. From there he tramped to Williamsford station where he crawled into an empty box car and road to Protton Station, where he was captured by P. C. Shoulidge, who noticed him coming from the train and going into his brother's hotel. He was thoroughly cowed and made no resistance and was brought back to town on Monday. Years Day. The Chief and P. C. Herron drove to Meaford and Williams Falls and returned via Woodford in time to dispatch P. C. Shoulidge on the morning train to Protton.—U. S.
