Come all my good people I would have you take it cool While I speak of a contagion Which broke out in a school.

There is Mr. William Robinson Two clever twins has he, He is certain they are free.

Who lives down by the lake Who keeps his children all at home For fear the plague they'el take.

Next we come to one John Kelly Who was l "d to make his brags, That they could find no plague marks On his little Katie Nags.

The next is Robert Bradley Who has boys and girls galore, And when his kids used up their cure They all required more.

Then we come to William Bradley, The school treasurer was he; His only son escaped the plague, For he lived in Berkeley.

Then you cross to Mr Neely's And find him in great grief For the plague they had so very bad And failed to find relief.

The next is Mrs. Hannah. Who says folk are not wise, And think it only just and right The trustees to chastise.

And now we come to Greenaway's And find he takes it cool, Mrs. Hartley returned from New- But cannot think of keeping Papa's duckie home from school.

> Then sure we come to Adam "throth," And find him in a hobble For having lost much precious tima With Mrs. Murphy's model, timber from here for () wen Sound dry The next you see is Sindy Grant Who at us fun did poke After she'd ta'n a smoke.

And now for Joseph Middleton, I think we'll let him pass, For since he took himself a wife He stays behind for class.

Then o'er the line is Samuel Young I'd have you all take heed. He says "be the mortial" its odious And a scandalous thing indeed.

On crossing o'er to M. Madill We find him calm and cosy For Mark and Dan and Catherine Ann Are healthy kids and rosy. We finally come to the Lyon's den

And hear them howl and roar good lad Which grieved old Jimmie sore.
