Through the Winter with the Flock.
The most injurious practice that is frequently followed in wintering sheep, consists in crowding them into warm, badly ventilated quarters during the winter season. There is nothing that will more surely affect sheep injuriously than to huddle them in close pens, for they must have room in the sheds and judicious liberty in the yards to keep in sound vigorous health. They should be sheltered from the wind, but they require nothing in the form of protection. Except during inclement weather the doors should be open, allowing them to run in and out as the humor comes upon them. The fold, for say one hundred sheep should be about fifty feet long and ten feet wide, with yards attached at least three or four times that size. It is the practice in carrying such a number of sheep over winter to divide the flock into groups of twenty or twenty-five. It is a very important matter to see that the floor of the pens is dry, and of such material that it will stay so if the pens are bedded with straw. Neglect of this matter will lead to scald, and eventually to foot rot. A layer of hard wood ash makes a covering for the floor that will serve the purpose well. The attentive and intelligent shepherd will be always on the alert to see that his sheep are never exposed to dampness in any form, either above or under foot. Dry, large, cool, and well ventilated pens influence success most in sheep raising.
After surrounding the flock with the most healthy conditions, their management becomes much easier and their feeding less elaborate. Some few will hold to the opinion that during winter sheep should not require water. This is a mistake that will be strikingly apparent if the practice is once tried of supplying them with clean, fresh water, even if they have an abundance of roots. The better results that follow the latter observance will be easily seen in the more satisfactory progress of the flock. Clover hay is the best fodder to feed, and next to it comes meadow hay of mixed grasses, cut early in the season. Roots, meaning turnip turnips and mangels, also make excellent food. During the first of the season twenty-five pounds per head each day may be fed with advantage, but as the ewes approach lambing time that the quantity should be lessened. For cold, watery rations are not to be recommended for feeding ewes in pregnancy. For feeding early in the season ewes are perhaps the best, but later on towards spring mangels should be substituted for them. When first stored mangels are too watery and acid in taste to feed, but as the season advances they acquire a sweet flavor which adds much to their palatability and food value. Turnips on the other hand, decrease in nutritive value as their age increases. The best grain to feed is a mixture of peas and oats. The feeding of cake is not, as a rule, advisable, for besides being expensive it is in any quantities, it has a tendency to heat the animals to which it is fed. This, however, does not apply to linseed, which is perhaps especially valuable, owing to its laxative qualities, and the feeding of a half pound or less each day becomes apparent in the softness, lustre, and strength of the wool. The quantity of grain to feed will vary from one to two pounds as the judgment of the shepherd may dictate. The aim should be to bring the ewes through the season in healthy, vigorous condition, so that when they lamb they will supply a good mass of rich milk. It is very desirable that uniform conditions should prevail, both in feeding and management, throughout the season, for if the least check is given, it at once injuriously affects the growth and strength of the wool fibre. It should be always in mind that no other domesticated animal responds more readily to good attentive treatment than sheep, and inversely that no other animal of the farm will more quickly show the effects of negligence.

A GOOD job is related at the expense of a modest young newspaper man, which is going the rounds simply credited to an Exchange. It is to the effect that the publisher of the pencil went out to report a party the other evening where the home had recently been blessed with a new baby. Accompanied by his best girl, he met the hostess at the door, and after the usual salutations asked after the baby's health. The lady who was quite deaf, and suffering from the grippe, thought he was asking about her cold and told him that though she usually had one every winter this was the worst one she ever had; it kept her awake at nights a good deal at first and confined her to her bed. Then noticing that the scribe was getting pale and nervous she said she could tell by his looks that he was going to have one just like hers, and asked him to go and lie down. The paper was out as usual next week but the local editor has quit enquiring about babies.
A MEETING was held on Friday evening last to consider the propriety of organizing a Literary Society in connection with the Mechanics' Institute. The following officers were elected: W. J. McFarland, President of the Mechanics' Institute, Hon. President; Wm. Lucas, President; Dr. Ego, Vice-President; I. B. Lucas, Sec. Treasurer. Programme Committee—Messrs. W. Turner, C. W. Casson, T. L. Moffat, Mrs. Wm. Brown and Misses. Mabel Mathews and Bella Benson. The officers, together with Messrs. W. A. Brown, Rev. Horace E. Bray, were appointed to draft a constitution, to be submitted to a meeting later. The above committee reported on Tuesday evening last, their draft of constitution adopted, and the first public meeting announced for Friday evening, 28th, at 8 o'clock in the council chamber. All members and their families are eligible to membership without fee by recording their names in the membership book. It is to be hoped that all will avail themselves of the opportunity of joining this commendable organization, and that many new members will be added to the Institute through its influence.

Tara is just now deeply interested in the branch railway to Owen Sound. The village apparently looks upon the proposed extension as likely to prove desirable, and a great many shares are laid up. If due attention is not paid at the outset, and a veterinary surgeon called in, a number of the cases are liable to turn into a serious form of heaves and other troubles of the respiratory organs. Horse owners should be on the lookout, and attend to any symptoms of influenza promptly.—Tara Leader.

OWEN SOUND, Nov. 18.—At an early hour this morning the residence of Mr. T. Evans, on the east hill, was burned to the ground. The fire was caused by the upsetting of a lamp on a chair by a terrier in chase of a rat. All the contents were saved in good order, but the house was entirely consumed. The building was valued at $600, with an insurance of $850.
There has been a sudden outbreak of influenza in horses through the southern portion of the county, and in some cases dangerous symptoms are developed, and a great many horses are laid up. Horse owners should be on the lookout, and attend to any symptoms of influenza promptly.—Tara Leader.

OWEN SOUND, Nov. 18.—The Cruiser has made a large number of seizures of nets and fish and fishing boats since the commencement of the season. On Tuesday, however, the largest seizure was made. When the steamer returned Vail's point the came upon three boats, a fishing tug and a number of nets, in which there were 1,500 fish. The whole outfit was taken in charge and towed down to Meaford, when a dispatch asking instructions was forwarded to the minister at Ottawa. The instructions received were to confiscate the fish and release the boats on the payment of a fine of $50. The owner claimed that the nets had been put out on the 25th ult., and that it had been too stormy to take them up, but residents along the shore said that they had seen the tug and fishing boats take the nets up and put others down on the 8rd inst.
