London's creat Fish Market.

Hill past 4 o'clock in the morning, and grey dawn is slowly breaking over London town. It is sultry Summer morning. The air is heavy with the odor of fish. There are drowds in the streets near Billings gate, a hurricane of voices that would deafen the people who were on the tower of Babel one day, now famous in history. Horses appear to be entangled in shafts and shafts in wheels, while the cries, the shouts, the abjurgations make a confused and deafening uproar. The clock strikes of and themarket opens, and moment the place swarms, with life. The vessels are there handed up in tirs in the river, laden with silvery cargoes; the porters are there running to and fro between the silvery language and the market; the railway vans are there running to and fro between the silvery language and the market; the railway vans are there running to and fro between the interventing hour their stands or benches, and the burgers are there ready to buy and pay.

On one occasion as midshipman, having gone ashore with the captain's Jerroid was left for a time in charge of the boat. While the captain was away two of the men asked for permission to go and buy something. Permission was given by their youthful and too good natured officer, who added:

The captain returned, but not the men:

The captain returned, but not the men; search was made for them, but they were not to be found; they had deserted, and Midshipman Jerroll was, in sad disgrace. The event made a lasting impression upon hint, so deep a one that he declared he could recognize the deserters at any time, as indeed be did. Some thirty years afterward, as he was passing along the Strand, the ex-midshipman was strack by the appearance of a baker's man who was looking into a shop window. He walked up to him, and rapping him sharply on the back, said: "I say, my friend, don't you think you've been rather a long time about that fruit?" The deserter was horror-struck, at being discovered, and could only gasp out, "Lor'd ir, is that you?" when Jerrold went on his way laughing.—[St. Nicholas. ay laughing .- [St. Nicholas.

The familiar proverty, "what its good for many is good for lits benat" is fully under stood by all horsement from the turf to the farm, from the stable to the saddle. Very high authorities on the subject of horse and cattle ailments, concur in the opinion of General Refus Ingalls, late Quartermaster. General, U.S. Army, who says "St. Jacobe Oil is the best paincure we ever used it conquers pain." This department has the custody and trestment of army horses and mules, and thousands are treated.

Southern Pacific Railroad Company has lost a river, and in consequence has a bridge whose occupation is gone. The Whitewater River has flowed from the Sierre Madre Monntains across the sands of the region just this side of the Seyen Palins as long as any one can remember. The station of Whitewater was located where the river crosses the railway and was supplied with water from its current. During the last heavy rains the Whitewater road in its might water from its current. During the last heavy rains the Whitewater road in its might water from its current. During the last heavy rains the Whitewater road in its might water from the whole country round about, washing out the bridge and the road bed and playing the inischief generally. Soon the rains and river stopped smultane ously, and the river has not been found since. It appeared to become ashamed of itself for doing so much harm, doll has apparently slunk away in disgust and sorrow. It is entirely gone At no point does it cross the railroad, as it would have to do worn it still in existence in some new course. The railroad company, in order to sective water for its station at Whitewater, has been obliged to build a pipe line way up to the mountains, at considerable expense. All last summer, during the hottest, dryest weather, the river ran placidly dong—in fact, it has never falled until after its "jag" of this winter. Now it forms one of the mysteries of that mysterious region, the Colorado River desort, and porhaps is flowing by the Pogleg Mine and possibly rippling beside the treasure laden Spanish galleon which lies somewhere it that region buried in sand.

Dr. T. A. Socum's is deep.; If beaton out thin, I believe i would cover the sky. Her voice is doubtil and her eyes show no radiance: He wrinkles are numberless. She is a sorry picture, and all because she is the victim of one of those complaints common to women. Her system is deranged. She needs a course of solf-treatment with Dr. Pierces Favorite Prescription. This will enalisate thoroughly those exeruciating periodical pains and functional weaknesses neident to her sea, and at the same time build up and invortable whole system by its health-imparing influence. A trial bottle will contince. The French are a great and gitted people. They are cognizant of 355 different ways of cooking eggs, besides sucking them out back of the barn.

The was in one of our schools the other day where I picked up the following thrilling composition written by a twelve year-old composition written by a twelve year-old girl, which is one of the best picces of Eng.
