Mares for Farm Work. Much of the success of the French and English farmers in breeding draft horses is in the fact that they use the mares to do the farm work, and they are the more regular breeders and the instinct for work is bred into the coll; but too many of our farmers keep the mares in idleness, especially if they keep the mares in idleness, especially if they have choice, high bred mares. They are too good to work, and they are kept fat and sleek to look at, and do not breed half the sleek to look at, and do not breed nail the time. Attherto there, has been some inexplicable prejudice in many quarters against using mares for harness purposes. Elsewhere, all over the world, mares are considered as good as geldings. In Germany especially they are largely used for harness work. Now a pair of hackney mares for phiacton or broughand or a pair of Yorkanire coach mares for a barpuche, are of infinitely more value as property than a pair of goldings.

The Wormer Zitung draws attention to a literary curiosity of some value which has lately been discovered in the library of Herry Moses Mannheimer. It consists of the Pentateuch with commentaries, Jashl and Nachmanides, and came out of the celebrated Bromberg collection in Venuce (1571). It was the first printed book which issued from the Bromberg Press, and is one of the oldest Hébrew Books extant;

An act of bravery in the Italian Alpine corps is reported. A few days ago the 47d Alpine Company were requrning from lirenito the Little St Bernard when Lieutenant Clivio fell into a crevasse. He was able to hold on to the edge till his companions came to his assistance. Not long after one of the soldiers disappeared. Lieutenant Freir immediately offered to be let down ited to a rope. After doing so he found that the snow which had fallen on to the soldier was so thick that lie could not alone remove it. Ho called for help, and many volunteered to be let down. Sergeant Nieyhet was chosen; and was lowered into the crevasse, which was 80ft deep, and most dangerous, because below it there was another abyss. After working for an hour, all three were pulled up, saved.

Speculating as to the probable cost of the recent railway accident at St. Mande, a Paris correspondent says:—The Charenton collision in September, 1881, which in some respocts resembled that of last Sunday, cost the Paris and Lyong Railwaynearly £30,000. This does not include some small life annuities paid to survivors who were dependent upon the victims. The Western Company paid over £90,000 compensation for the
