The meeting in connection with Victoria Methodist church held in the town hall on Tuesday evening of last week was considering the condition of the weather and the roads, quite successful. The choir of Medford Methodist church contributed liberally to the program and their selections were much appreciated. Interesting addresses were made by Rev. Messrs. Brown, Moyer, Waddell and Perry. Mr. Moyer was in his happiest vein. He has many good things in an entertaining way, and future church entertainments here will not be considered complete without the presence of this genial gentleman. The ever popular T. J. Wallace, of Griersville, was voted to the chair, and he filled up the pauses with witticisms and anecdotes in his own inimitable style. The good ladies of the congregation had provided a superabundance of eatables, and a social was announced for Thursday evening. It proved to be a very sociable affair indeed, and more since the night the village youths pelted Prof Keough, the alleged phrenologist and his dramatic assistant, "Slim Jim," with apples, corn cobs, and various other missiles, because of the "slimness of their show," has the town hall been the scene of such hilarity. The hall was arranged after the manner of a large drawing room, and games of many kinds were provided. Parlor croquet, chess, dominoes, pitching horse nails, tiddledy winks and authors, were conducted simultaneously in progress; mechanics, professional men, merchants and agriculturists, with their wives and best girls, struggled earnestly, jestingly and generally unsuccessfully, to toss ringers into the handle of a great big inglt; big girls and little girls and old men and boys practised untiringly with a miniature gum an old time game of marbles, with the accompanying "gun eyers," "dan dibbs" "knuckle down tight" and "no finch ing," between a venerable grandpapa of many years standing and two who are not yet even papas, created no little merriment. Friends and neighbors mingled pleasantly together, and here and there about the room there were indications that the ministers will have this to him by and by. All comers were well supplied and fed at tables in the north-east corner, while in a cosy boudoir away up in the south west corner Miss Martha Clark and her assistants dispensed ice cream to all and sundry who had nickels to spare. Miss Dove Cook, a tiny tot, mounted a chair and sang, "I am Jesus' little Lamb," quite prettily; Mr. J. E. Richards sang "Good bye Biddy Mr. Dear" in rollicking, lusty style; some of the village little girls contributed instrumental selections, and ever and anon there floated o'er the assembly inspiring music from the far-famed Rocklyn String Band. The receipts were very satisfactory, and the success of the gathering in all respects must have been gratifying to the promoters.

Tut! tut! What does a bit of a storm amount to when a fellow's in love. Will Edwards, spurred his pacer through thirty miles of it.

What's the matter that some enterprising fellow doesn't start a cheese factory in this vicinity.

They began in November and didn't let up on it till the 19th inst. Of course there were stormy days, courtin' days, la grippe days, amounting in all to over twenty; but the other three months and a week, John Wiggins and Will Banks were sawing away. We doubt if any other two men in the county have done so well. They sawed over 475 cords of wood, 30 thousand feet of logs, besides lopping to take out some barn timber. Just fancy you see a pile of wood 4 feet high and 3800 feet long. Quite a fence. At your humble servant's they cut 105 cords in 15 days and dug out their own timber. Their biggest day's work was 10½ cords in 7 hrs. 30 min. The above is solid facts. Ed the jolt tells.

Zion's soiree last Tuesday was a very happy affair. There were loads of eatables to spare. Deputy Staples most genially filled the chair. Good singing, capital reciting and an excellent speech by Rev. Flavg of Varney made up the programme. Proceeds $20.

Why Exempt Churches?

Globe, March 26.

"Why Exempt Churches?" was the subject of a discourse in the Gerrard street Methodist Church last Sunday evening by the pastor, Rev. W. J. Barkwell. He said:—If they had read history carefully and intelligently they had been convinced that there was no lasting national life apart from religion; that religion and patriotism, the church and state, were mutually dependent and mutually helpful. Like husband and wife, they went arm in arm in their mission or mercy to aid and bless the world. The church was to the state what the soul was to the body—its very spirit and life. The nations of the world that had become great were perpetuated by a strong religious faith; that was the inspiration of their noble venture and heroic life. Were it possible for the state to survive the corruption of its religion then the greatest empire this world had ever known would still be exercising its almost universal sway upon the earth. But the sceptre of authority had long ago fallen from the hand of Rome—her crown had long since fallen from her queenly brow, and the decline and fall of the Roman Empire was a terrible illustration of the truth that "the nation that will not serve God shall perish," for with the religious degeneracy of ancient Rome came the crumbling of her mighty empire. The same was true of the history of the Israelites. When spiritually strong they were nationally irresistible; when religiously corrupt, they fell before their enemies. This fair Dominion—this paradise regained—was once a woody wilderness, full of roaming savages, but the missionaries of the church had blazed their way through those forests primeval, and transformed the aborigines into useful, peaceful citizens, and had laid the foundation for the national superstructure and the splendid civilization which is theirs to enjoy to day. If this testimony was true, the state was debtor to the church more than it could ever pay, and it was the veriest folly and the basest ingratitude now, in the palmy days of her prosperity, for the country to demand tribute from the institution that had been the very soul of her existance in the past and was essential to the peace and stability of her being in the future. Isaac Watts was thinking truth as well as poetry when he sang:

"These temples of His grace,
How beautiful they stand,
The honors of our native place,
The bulwarks of our land."

The moral influence exercised by the church upon the state was another reason why the church should be exempt. Here the preacher gave some thrilling incidents from his own ministry of persons saved to usefulness in the state through the agencies of the church and with visible emotion exclaimed, "Bye who could calculate the number under every man's ministry saved in like manner to do honor to the State, the multitude that were reclaimed and reclaimed from vice and crime the indolent that had been made industrious, the thriftless that had been made thrifty, the profligate that had been made provident, the millions that every week thronged the churches, troubled, perplexed, burdened and ready to die—since meditating their escape as a means of escape from the burden of life, but while in the sanctuary had been made to think, feel and act, and thus prepared for the duties and responsibilities of life."

Fred Firth—I was covered with pimples and had boils and sores appearing on other parts of my body.
