branches and the movement in hardware is steady. There have been no marked changes in groceries, the movement continues restricted. Retail merchants are carrying small stocks and are ordering very conservatively, and like the wholesalers are not evidently looking for any immediate advance in selling.

The produce market, as usual at this season of the year, displays no activity. The crop of wheat, however, and not much has been done yet in the way of harvesting has begun in some sections of Ontario and Quebec. Butter is now coming in in almost any quantity, with prices weakening. The cause of the recent scarcity is attributed to the action of the Montreal speculators, who had been storing butter for export; it is difficult to do so and maintain its quality so as to realize high prices.

The Canadian butter market has been a success. The price of butter has been advanced to 12c in order to be sold at 12c in the United States. The price of butter does not get the same attention from makers as it used to, and it does not seem to be as well as it should be.

The restoration of normal conditions in the provision market is being followed by a slight increase in legitimate business. There has been a further decline in the price of wheat, and the market is now showing a slight recovery.

The Canadian Customs Administration has been reorganized, and the new structure will be in operation by the end of the year.

Mark Twain's Friends Asked for His Opinions.
A number of friends of Mark Twain have been gathered at various points in the city to give him an unhappy quarter hour on April 10th. George W. Cable, who was one of the first to meet him, said that he had never seen him so happy as he was on that day.

Some of the demands were very funny. Edmund Clarence Steadman's letter was one of the most amusing. He asked Twain to write a book for him, and to give him a copy of it.

Mr. Twain was very kind and answered all the demands. He said that he would write a book for Steadman, and would give him a copy of it.
