wheat market closed strong The wheat market closed strong of Saturday night in New York, and since then the tone has been irregular, at though prices have not changed much either way. Every rumor from abroacation in the Berlin news has been especially uncertain, the prices here bobbed up and down in sympathy. But hearly ever day the previous day's closing price was regained before business ended. The man's ettimates were circulated on Woo man's estimates were circulated on Wo nextay and caused some shifting. I puts the amount used as fodder at le than fifty million bushols, which is to low the general boliof. Previous predifigures were not intended to include the considerable amount of wheat used every year in this way, the estimate of less than fifty million bushels is supposed too low. Keports of visible supply did not show the expected decrease of over a million for the week, which disappointed the majority of traders who were counting on still higher prices.
