Gertie Wants Her Dower.—Orangeville Post: "Mrs. Gertie Kidd, widow of the late Jno. Kidd, of Mono Mills, has served a notice on Mr. W. L. Walsh, the executor of her husband, that she claims dower out of the lands of the deceased. The notice was signed by W. H. Robins, of Orangeville, Gertie's father, as the next friend of the youthful widow, who is under 21 years of age and is, therefore, an infant in the eyes of the law. It is understood that the children of the late John Kidd who were devised real estate by his will will dispute her claim, and that the chief ground on which they expect to succeed is that Gertie was a faithless wife to their father. There are forty days in which to settle with Gertie, at the end of which time she will likely issue a writ if her demand is not satisfied. The real estate which the late John Kidd owned during his life is worth between ten and twelve thousand dollars, so that if Gertie successfully presses her claim she will receive between three and four thousand dollars."

This district is thickly inhabited by a thrifty intelligent, reading people, and while the country is dotted with postoffices, there is room for improvement in the manner of conveying the mail without materially affecting the cost: for instance, a letter mailed at Markdale for Goring, 8 miles distant, has to travel first to Owen Sound, thence via Meaford and Rockdale, a distance of over 60 miles in order to reach its destination. It is proposed to run a line from Markdale to Blantyre to connect with that from Meaford, and give three mails a week. Mr. Jas.
