Upon the opening day of the Parlia-nent of Religions in Chicago, Prince Serge Walsdomy related the following Russian legend:

"The Russians say that once upon a Niagara Falls Park & River Ry. the an exceedingly wholed old woman led, and foll of course, into grievous tor-cent. One they she saw an angel flying rough the blue sky, and she called to receive the blue sky, and she called to ld any good act to a fellow being. When the angel made this enquiry the old we-man pendered and pendered, for she had been very, very, wicked. Finally she re-immbered that she had once given a car-rol to a beggir. Then God said to the angel, 'Find the carrot and stretch it out to the poor samer. So the angel, held the carrot, and when the old woman' graspel it she began to rise out of the horrible depths. The angel lifted and the bid woman felt horrible the same stretch and looking down sile saw that another sinner was clinging to her, and they so another and another followed, each sustained by his grasp upon the origanous and still the carrot held. In mitt nir the old woman was selzed by a horrible fear lost the carret should break. So she began to remonstrate with the sinner directly below her 'Let go, she sait you must not cling to me, 'Let go, she sait you must not cling to me, 'Let go, she sait you must not cling to me, 'Let go, what is care.'

Spiritual beauty comes from the light. The character way, be noble, or storng, or even grand, when its other riement is the loyalty of the will to conscione; but in order that it may be beauty that it was the large beauty and for the second of the constant of the tiful it must have both feeling a dom; it must have sympathy and spon-taneousness. The virtue of Josus was al-ways beautiful; it was so full of human feeling and divine power. It was not hard for Him to be good and His goodness was cover hard, His truth, His purity, His fortitude, His justice, wore always filled with his love. His moral strength was always infinitely, graceful His divinity was human in the moral constants.
