America asks England's Assistance.

It is not every day that an American arm will admit its inability to fill an order for goods from a Canadian house and ask the assistance of an English firm to help them out. Nevertheless, a reliable despatch says, that the demand for the "Orphan's Prayor" picture which is sent to all subscribers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal, is already so great that the publishers of the Family Herald r calizing that the firm of Prang &,Co., of Boston, were not able to produce the pictures fast enough, cabled to the firm of Rowney & Co., London, Eng., for ssistance. A favourable reply has been received, and their large estabishment is now busy day and night, on the Family Herald's great premium picture, "Orphan's Prayer." Of course, the work of producing the Orphan's Prayer" requires a great deal of time and skill, but, with what are probably the two best Art houses n the world working day and night he publishers of the Family Herald hope to be able to fill promptly all orders. The plan announced at the beginning by the 'publishers of the Family Herald to send the "Orphan's Prayer" to subscribers in the order in which subscriptions reach them seems to give perfect justice. "First come, first served" is their motto, and it is a good one. The price of the Family "Orphan's Prayer" we see is only one

His choice epithets, yigorous language, pure English and logical deductions, leavened as they are with the mighty power of christian liberty, must ever win for this great champion of political, civil and religious freedom, an acquiescence with his views in any cause he attempts to advocate. Sad as it may be to witness the death-blow of my darling. masterpiece, it is a consolation in my bereavement to know that Critic has spent his life and energies in alleviating the sufferings of the poor, and acting as a beacon-light to warn his unfortunate and benighted brethren off the shods that would cause inevitable ruin. He has been in fact whole charity. concert in theory, the practical workings of which have been mostly learned from headquarters. In such a dilemma I must accept the inevitable; allow Critic to indulge his ancies, revel in his-own greatness. bathe in the ocean of his own glory, loll on the bosom of his multitudinou admirers; and while heisthus luxurint ing I must try to become oblivious of his criticisms, and feast my fancies on the previously expressed opinions of men of wisdom and sound indgement.
