SALTING BUTTER.

This is the season of the year when the dairy maid poises her pail and the progressive dairyman is on the look out for pointers whereby the product of the dairy, may be improved and profits thereby increased. In this country a large quantity of choice dairy butter is made, but there is also much that is only second or third rate quality, with conditions generally favourable, why is this the case? The answer is easy. Nine-tenths of the failure, we believe, lies in coarse salt and oversalting. Almost numberless complaints from buyers and consumers are heard on this point and justly so. Much that would be sweet and palatable butter is made rancid with salt which in the first place is coarse and unfit for the dairy and in the second place either from lack of knowledge or wilful greed for weight is used in such extravagant quantity that the pure melty flavour of the butter is at once destroyed, and the article thereby rendered unfit for table use or for commanding the best market value.

A writer in Farm and Home some time ago furnished an article apropos from which we quote for the benefit of butter makers. He said: Ordinary barrel salt is unfit for butter. It is coarse, harsh, hard to dissolve and impure. This should be sufficient to banish it entirely from the dairy, but it is not, and thereby a great loss is sustained, when the wholesaler gets a load of this butter he shaves it up thin and soaks out the salt. He doesn't do this for nothing. He then recharns it in some skim milk to impart a flavor, for the water which took out the salt left it flat flavored. Then he salts it with good dairy salt works and packs it and puts it on the market. All this is expensive and even then the product is not as good as it would have been had this extra treatment been unnecessary, if the best dairy salt. A salt which is not only pure and soft so that it will not tear the grain, but dissolves quickly. The best. This is because the presence of the common farm dairy salt makes control and the butter is injured while waiting for the salt to dissolve. On this point we have to say to salt in the churn, work, ex- the churn sweet. salt over the butter then the hand a few times it will not butter will be mixed. salting in the churn saves working for the butter to get rid of the butter is in granular form when it is put in. In churn salting more salt is used because the butter will be in a more diluted solution and will hold less water. About one pound will give the same result of salt in the finished as one pound of the product when salted on a

Some of the farmers here are beginning to look blue at the continued damp weather as it prevents them completing their seeding; others whose land is dry enough, still follow the plough unheeding the falling moisture.

This sort of weather must, however, be good for fall wheat as it now promises an abundant harvest.

Mr. Andrew Wickens, who lives a little west of this village met with a bad accident on Thursday last, which it was at first feared might deprive him of his sight. Stooping to unhitch one of his horses the animal kicked striking him on the temple near the eye which filled with blood and for a few days was totally darkened. At the time of writing objects are discernable and the best is hoped for. By an accident a few years ago Mr. Wickens lost the sight of the other eye which makes the present affliction doubly hard, and would have been deplorable had the sight of this one been destroyed.

Building improvements have begun M. Richardson has the material on the ground for repairing and improving the building formerly used as a manse. Mr. Whitten is raising the building occupied by baker Lindsay and Mrs. Armstrong's old homestead property is undergoing considerable repairs.

We are sorry to say he came home very much [illegible] and very low and great fear is felt for his recovery. The family has cast a gloom over our fair village.

Miss Emma Gates left Monday for Owen Sound where she has employment for a few months.

Fishing season is on, consequently a number of our citizens are to be seen pole in hand along the river trying to tempt the speckled beauties to come out of the wet.

Quite a number of our citizens attended the quarterly meeting in Bognor on Sabbath. Business meeting took place here on Monday.

The ball player said been seriously injured in the course foot ball game, and Capt. Biff, of the opposing eleven, had been accused of slugging. An inquiry was set on foot the committee, chosen from both sides, reported unanimously as follows: We find that Capt. Biff acted in a gentlemanly way throughout the game. He did not do a thing to the complainant except to kick him under the chin, knock him down stamp on his chest, break two of his ribs and his collar bone and use other legitimate means to gain possession of the ball."

May Ladies' Home Journal.

The May Ladies' Home Journal minutely reflects the sentiment and spirit of spring. "In An Old-Fashioned Garden" fairly emits the season's fragrant flavor, as do other contributions in prose and verse. Hon. John Russell Young recalls the notable incidents—fetes, receptions and pageants, etc.—of General Grant's memorial tours of the world, and ex-President Harrison gives highly interesting glimpses of the President's home and home life in article on "The Domestic Side of the White House"—the concluding one of his admirable series. Edward W. Bok editorially presents the really practical side of the crusade against the slaughter of birds for their plumage, and forcibly protests against the pernicious habit of spitting in public places. A reminisent article by Mrs. Raymond Maude, "My Mother as I Recall her," gives some delightful glimpses of the personal side of Jenny Lind, especially of her home life. By The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar per year; ten cents per copy.

Another Pioneer at Rest.

O. S. ARGENTEAU.

We are called upon to chronicle the death of an old and much respected citizen and neighbor, and one of Sydenham's oldest pioneers, in the person of Mrs. Walter Locke, who died at her residence on Wednesday morning, 14th inst., after a lingering illness which she bore with patience and true christian fortitude, and which to do her justice, requires more than mere passing notice. The deceased lady was born near Prestonian the Province of Quebec, in the year 1824, and was in her 73rd year. Her parents moved to Adjala in the County of Simcoe when she was about three years of age where she grew into womanhood, and was married to Mr. Walter Locke, her now bereaved and sorrowing husband. After being married the then young couple moved to Sydenham, then a wilderness with scarcely a mark in the forest. Here they built their little log cabin and commenced housekeeping, prepared to face the hardships of pioneer life. Here side by side with her husband, she cheerfully accepted the privations incident to the lot of the first settlers, toiling early and late to bring order out of chaos, and by perseverance, patience and strict economy they succeeded in erecting the commodious and comfortable home where they spent their declining years in retirement and comfort. The family consists of six daughters and five sons, all grown up and who all but two sons who reside in the United States, were around her bedside to wait upon her and comfort her last declining days. Early in life the deceased joined the Methodist church, of which she always has been an ardent, consistent and pious member. Last May the aged couple celebrated their golden wedding, and their whole family were able to celebrate it with them, a fact worthy of note, and what very few families of the same number can say, that for half a century they could meet together without a break until now. The deceased lady was a woman of unbounded charity, not as the word goes, but in the true sense of the term. No one was ever turned from her door hungry, and very many received, as well as her cordial welcome greeting a much more substantial proof of her generosity by the timely help and ready assistance which she gave in every time of need and trouble. To say that she will be missed in the community in which she dwelt would be too mild a term; but that she is mourned for by her neighbors and acquaintances would be nearer expressing the sentiments of all, and many an unseen tear will be shed to her memory by those who knew her.
