

SHE COULD NOT EAT

THE STATEMENT OF A LADY WHO WAS A DYSPLECTIC.

Afflicted With Pains in the Stomach, Nausea and Vomiting—Constitution, Headaches and Other Distressing Symptoms Followed.

From Le Standard, Sorel, Que.

Dyspepsia and kindred disorders of the digestive organs are becoming alarming among us. It is safe to say that there are few afflictions ranking more serious or more real misery than indigestion. It is said that happiness and a good digestion go hand in hand and the state of mind is often the truest test of health. It may be safely said, therefore, that the medicine which cures dyspepsia is a blessing to man kind, a promoter of human happiness whose good work is too widely known to require the opinion of others. The author of Sod's Que, and it is because of this that she gave the following statement to a representative of The Sceptic:

"For some time past," she said, "I had been suffering from a condition that at first I could not define, but which proved to be a severe attack of dyspepsia. After much fidgeting I got to the point where I was too ill to eat, and my appetite was lost. Aunt Mary—not to night, but to-morrow night, Aunt Mary—not to night."

"Do not be childish, Audine," said Mrs. Neville, rather sharply. "I really mean come."

Audine withdrew her hands and looking wistfully said, "Very well."

"Audine," began Mrs. Neville, seriously, "you are no longer a child; you have arrived at an age at which a girl begins to take responsibility over her own life."

Audine lowered her face.

"Audine, that power is a great responsibility. Do you understand?"

"Audine cannot be too carefully used," said Mrs. Neville, restlessly twirling her fingers together. "If a man's whole happiness depends upon a woman, it is the woman's responsibility to make greater, is it not?"

"Yes," again murmured Audine.

"And you have done that, my darling; your ways and looks have taught me to love you; you have made me very happy." And Audine said with a timid voice, "It will make you my own dear little daughter."

But Audine, with a dignified air, said, "Audine, I am not a child; I am a young woman, and I fear that Godfrey could not understand his steps," said Audine, suddenly.

"Audine, that power is a great responsibility. Do you understand?"

"Audine, you must have much better come to bed."

"No, no—let me go," and Audine broke from her detail, running hands and ran down stairs.

Mrs. Neville was still in the drawing-room, but the light was all put out, save one hand-candle, and the remains of the fire.

"Audine went swiftly up to her,

"My dear, you consented to bed."

"Yes."

"Audine will be my joy and happiness all our lives."

"Let me kiss you, my dearest," said Audine, "you little know."

But Audine recited:

"The stars—the stars—one came in."

"Audine, you are streaming! It is Godfrey's wife, the stars all!"

Audine, How happy you little know."

From the touch of her breath,

"Audine went to her,

"Audine, you are streaming! It is Godfrey's wife, the stars all!"

"Audine, you are streaming! It is Godfrey's wife, the stars all!"

"Audine, you are streaming! It is Godfrey's wife, the stars all!"
