Carried in Bruce

The plebiscite in the county of as to whether a House of Industry for the poor should be erected resulted in majority of about 2000 in favor of establishing a home for the Nearly every municipality gave a substantial majority in favor of the house of industry, although it was claimed by many county councillors just as it has been in this county, that the people were opposed to the scheme. We have reason to believe that on this matter some of the county councillors of Grey grossly misrepresent their constituents, and it is therefore no wonder that means were resorted to by a certain element in the county council to balk an expression of opinion by the electorate. It is a strange thing that the taking of a plebiscite, which was a perfectly legal thing in the county of Bruce, would have been an attociously illegal act in the county of Grey. The electors of Bruce did not allowany opinion of a Provincial government official to stand in their way in this matter. Whether it was legal or illegal the plebiscite was hell and the people went to the polls and pronouncd emphatically in favor of a house of industry.-OS Sun.
