FORTUNES MADE IN A DAY.

A Record-Breaking Clean-Up on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Montreal, Jan. 10.—Saturday was the heaviest day on the Montreal Stock Exchange for five years or more, no less than 12,600 shares having changed hands within an hour and a half. The wonderful rise in Montreal Street Railway from 226 to 244 has made a difference of $400,000 in the capital stock, and the increased value of holdings represents little fortunes to many of the operators. James Ross stands to make $20,000 in a single day, and the Forgets the same amount. Mr. A. Turcotte is also $16,000 better off than on Friday, while Mr. A. D. Provencher, one of the leading operators of the street, made $7,000 during that bright Saturday morning. Others, of more or less note, have also made their little pile.

Troy is in a Bad Way.

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 10.—Troy, the respited Napanee murderer, will be brought to Kingston Penitentiary and placed in the criminal asylum. His conduct in Napanee Jail is very exciting. He raves and talks incoherently, but indignantly denies that he is the subject of hallucination. He says he does not expect to be here on Jan. 14; that before that day he will, in some unexplainable way, be removed. The medical men say that it is one of the strangest cases that has come under their notice.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Business Being Rushed at the Assembly.

THE DATE OF THE ELECTIONS.

No Conclusion as Yet Reached by the Government—The Premier's Statement—Prorogation Likely to Take Place Within a Week—What Was Done on Saturday.

Toronto, Jan. 10.—The end of the session rush is now on, and if the expectations of the Government are realized this week will suffice to despatch the business on the programme. The Premier intimated that prorogation might, if the printing is sufficiently advanced, take place on Saturday, or at latest on Monday. Mr. Hardy was unable to satisfy the public curiosity as to when the election will be held. In response to an invitation by Mr. Whitney to unbosom himself of this important State secret, he intimated that the Government had not yet come to any conclusion as to the date.

The following bills were given a third and final reading:

To prevent the spread of the San Jose scale.

To make further provision respecting maternity boarding houses and the protection of infant children.

The Attorney-General gave notice that after to-day (Monday) there shall, unless otherwise ordered, be a morning as well as afternoon and an evening session of the House.

Hon. Mr. Davis' bill to amend the Ontario Companies Act passed the committee stage.

The Attorney-General's bill to amend the Manhood Suffrage Registration Act was read a second time.

Hon. Mr. [illegible] moved the second reading of his bill extending for six years the right of Victoria University graduates to five separate and distinct representatives on the Toronto University Senate.

Mr. Whitney asked if it was intended that at the end of the six years in question a complete fusion would take place.

Hon. Mr. Ross, in reply, expressed the hope that at the end of six years the fusion of the universities would be brought about easily and naturally.

The bill was read a second time, the Ministers leaving it an entirely open question as to whether, at the end of six years, the special representation should be again extended to Victoria.

Hon. Mr. Hardy read a second time his bill respecting the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1897, and it was also put through the committee stage.

The Attorney-General's bill to "further facilitate the purchase of toll roads by municipalities," was read a second time.

Hon. Mr. Gibson introduced and had read a first time a bill to amend the Act respecting the Association of Ontario Land Surveyors.

The Attorney-General introduced a bill "respecting the investment of court funds."

Mr. Whitney asked the Attorney-General for the probable date of prorogation.

The Premier, in reply, said that he thought prorogation should take place on Monday, Jan. 17, or perhaps next Saturday. As to the date of the elections he could not say. As a matter of fact, the Government had as yet decided upon no date.

THE CASE OF MRS. MAYBRICK

Her Friends Abandon One Position to Take Another.

London, Jan. 10.—Recent advices show that the supporters there of Mrs. Florence Maybrick have finally decided to abandon the attempts which they have so long persisted in, to secure the release of the American woman from prison on technical grounds. Their future efforts will be based entirely upon the arguments that the punishment which she is suffering is excessive and disproportionate to the sentence customarily imposed for the crime of attempted poisoning, which, they assert, is all that was attempted to be proven against her, and upon appeals for clemency on account of Mrs. Maybrick's physical condition. The possibility that clemency will be extended to Mrs. Edith May Carew, who was convicted of poisoning her husband, by the British Consular Court in Japan, and who was recently brought to the English prison wherein Mrs. Maybrick is confined, has rekindled the hopes of Mrs. Maybrick's friends.

British Force in Egypt.

London, Jan. 10.—The Anglo-Egyptian force now operating on the Nile consists of 18,000 Egyptians, three battalions of British troops, and the Nile gunboats, all commanded by the Sirdar, Sir Herbert Kitchener. The latter refuses to allow the war correspondents to go beyond the rail head.

THE DEATH WATCH SET.

Mrs. Sternaman, Convicted of Murdering Her Husband, Now Continually Under the View of Sharp Eyes.

Cayuga, Ont., Jan. 8.—Man's mercy alone can now save Mrs. Olive Adelia Sternaman from death. They notified the doomed woman yesterday that her appeal for a new trial had been denied and that her last hope lay in executive clemency. The death watch was put on duty in the morning, and from now until she goes to the gallows on Jan. 24 sharp eyes will watch her every movement.

Not in twenty years has the Crown demanded a woman's life as the cost of a crime and as the adequate warning to other lawless souls. Women have been hanged in Canada, but none of the rising generation can recall an instance. This fact adds to the interest aroused by Mrs. Sternaman's seemingly hopeless situation. Petitions have been scattered broadcast throughout Canada, and in every county of the Province of Ontario people are peddling them and securing signatures. Late yesterday afternoon W. M. German of Welland, who defended Mrs. Sternaman, sent word to her that he would appear before the Minister of Justice early next week, and would appeal for clemency and urge a commutation of her sentence to life imprisonment. It is the last card, the final play in the woman's game with death. If it loses she will spend her life in Kingston Prison in the murderess' ward. If it loses she will go to her death sixteen days from to-day.

Gen. Booth Sails.

Southampton, Jan. 10.—A great crowd assembled here Saturday to bid farewell to "General" William Booth, the head of the Salvation Army, who sailed for New York on the American Line steamship St. Paul.

The Extravagant Czar.

London, Jan. 10.—The Czar and Czarina will receive their friends at the Paris Exposition of 1900 in their own pavilion, which will cost £90,000.

The Jewin Street Fire.

London, Jan. 10.—It has been ascertained that the loss resulting from the recent so-called Jewin street fire (also known as the Crippiegate fire) amounts to £750,000. The inquiry is dragging, the evidence obtained being directed towards proving the fire of incendiary origin, and in the direction of demonstrating that the fire brigade is inefficient.

$3,000 Blaze in Trenton.

Trenton, Ont., Jan. 10.—Saturday night about 9 o'clock fire was discovered in the rear of A. W. Hawley's drug store, Front street. The stock was badly damaged by smoke and water. Loss about $3,000, covered by insurance. Cause of fire unknown.

A FREE TRADE RESULT.

The Canadian Binder Twine Industry in Danger of Being Stamped With Ruinous Surplus Twine.

Ottawa, Jan. 8.—Messrs. Fielding and Paterson heard an influential deputation yesterday. It consisted of Senator Cox, Messrs. Mann, Hamilton, McLaughlin, Connor of St. John; E. D. McIntosh, James Wilson, J. N. Greenshields and other Montrealers, who discussed with the Ministers the present position of the binder twine industry. On Jan. 1 binder twine went on the free list, under the Fielding tariff of last session. The deputation claim that without some protection the industry cannot exist, that the surplus stock of the United States manufacturers will be dumped into Canada, and that the result will be to close up Canadian factories, while the consumer himself will not derive any benefit. It is said, while the Government cannot consistently recede from its position in favor of free binder twine, more protection will be given the manufacturers in other lines of twine.

Col. Turner on Duty Again.

Col. Turner, United States Consul-General, has returned from Connecticut, where he spent the Christmas holidays. He says that, provided the requisite permission is obtained from the British Government, a Connecticut regiment will be here on May 24 to take part in the Queen's Birthday celebration. The reported trouble in the regiment, to which the New York Sun gave currency, is said by Col. Truner to be a gross falsehood.

The Stolen Coins.

The Commissioner of Dominion Police has sent to all parts of Canada, the States and to Scotland Yard, London, a list of the valuable coins stolen from the National Art Gallery two days ago.

Dan. Rose's Contract.

Dan A. Rose of Toronto was here again yesterday in connection with his Ogilvie contract with the Government. Dan has finally closed with the Department, and with the exception of a few rival and jealous publishers, it is conceded that he deserves credit for his smartness.

The Irrigation Accounts.

One of the Government bills to be introduced in Parliament the coming session will be to revise and consolidate the irrigation accounts. The experience of the past three years of the workings of these Acts in the Territories, demonstrated certain defects in the law, which it is proposed to amend, and at the same time to simplify the law.

Dominion Coal Co. Deal.

Premier Murray of Nova Scotia and Attorney-General Longley arrived here yesterday and had conferences with Messrs. Fielding, Mills and other Ministers. The special object of the visit is said to be in connection with the deal with the Dominion Coal Co., made in Boston recently.

TARTE IS AFTER THE SENATE.

Says It Must Be Reformed and Elevated and Made Democratic.

Montreal, Jan. 8.—"The Senate must be reformed; it must be elevated; we must give it character; we must give it the prestige it has lost; in a word, the Senate must be made more democratic."

The above is contained in an article which Hon. J. Israel Tarte writes concerning Canada's Upper Chamber.

"The composition of the Upper House is in constant conflict with the thoughts of the fathers of confederation, who certainly never dreamed of making the Senate a hospital for political invalids or an exclusively Conservative retreat. If we really have responsible Government, and if the Government and the House of Commons really represent the voice of the people, how then can that Government be left at the mercy of that body of immovables?"

It is about decided that eight of the ringleaders of the recent revolt at St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary will be flogged, although the date is withheld.

Mgr. Bruchesi left for Toronto last evening to consult the Archbishop of Toronto re the papal encyclical.

Jennie Warren Found Her Affinity In the Matrimonial Column.

ROMANCE ENDS IN TRAGEDY.

The Denver Police Believe Frederick C. Sanches Deliberately Murdered His Bride For Her Life Insurance—A Story of Dissipation and Deception.

In the Denver jail lies Frederick Caprisano Sanches, alias Joe Sanchez, only 23 years old, but charged with the deliberate planning and execution of a revolting crime—the winning of the affections of a foolish and unprotected girl, marrying her and at the end of two months murdering her for the Insurance he had placed upon her life.

FREDERICK C. SANCHEZ.

The story of the crime, according to the belief of the Denver police, is one of carefully planned deception leading to the opportunity for its execution. The chance for its carrying out came through a matrimonial advertisement inserted in a paper by Miss Jennie Warren of Metropolis, Ills. An orphan 19 years old. By means of the advertisement she met young Sanchez, or Sanchez met her, and following a few days' acquaintance married him and went with him to Denver, according to belief, to meet death at his hands.

Young Sanchez is the son of J. H. Sanchez, a highly respected citizen and sheriff of Valencia county, N. M. The young man was known as a roistering blade in his home town, and one of his chief delights was to attend the Mexican chicken fights, which are a favorite pastime of his race.

Last June Sanchez attended a dance at Peralta, N. M., where one of the belles was Miss Virginia Otero de Otero, daughter of Lamas, niece of R. M. Otero, register of the United States land office, and herself an attractive. Becoming the attentions of other young men, Sanchez engaged in a quarrel and attempted to shoot the young woman's father. He had previously made threats of killing her when she refused his attentions. Immediately after that affair Sanchez was hurried out of the county, and because of the prominence of the families in the matter was hushed up.

When his father sent him money to go to Mexico he supplied the young man liberally with money, giving him $1,200 for his expenses and bidding him remain away until his rash act was forgotten. Young Sanchez reached Denver some time in July and remained in the city about a month in idleness, spending money liberally, and says he still dressed and inclined to be "sporty."

It was while lounging about that he noticed an advertisement in a matrimonial paper, signed by Miss Jennie Warren of Metropolis, Ills., seeking for a correspondent "with a view to matrimony." Sanchez answered the "ad.," Miss Warren replied, letter succeeded letter, photographs were exchanged, and it seemed that two souls had found each other. Miss Warren's letters were ingenuous and trusting. She wrote that she was an orphan, unhappy in her environments and longing for relief from uncongenial surroundings. He painted a glowing picture of their happy future. The sight of his affianced's portrait "or her sweet face, he declared, had lighted the fires of love in his soul and time limped with leaden feet until he could make her his wife. He told her he had a lucrative position in the postoffice, and sent her a flattering letter-of recommendation, signed by a mythical personage, one "A. S. Johnson." He also sent her an engagement ring on Aug. 10 and announced his intention of following it on Aug. 18, which he did.

Sanchez reached Metropolis on Aug. 21, and the marriage took place the next day. The couple left for the west a day or two later. The friends of the young woman were opposed to the marriage, thinking it too hasty, but she was evidently infatuated with the young man and impressed with the stories he told of his position and prospects in his western home, and would listen to no postponement of the wedding.

JENNIE WARREN.

They arrived in Denver on Aug. 26 and engaged rooms at the Windsor hotel. It was only a few days before the people about the hotel were whispering that the young couple were given to quarrelling. The wife was noticed with reddened eyes and Sanchez himself frequently wore a forbidding scowl. Soon they removed to the Columbia, a second class hotel. And here, too, the inharmonious relations of the pair were observed and commented upon by the attaches of the house. Sanchez spent a good part of his time away from his young wife, he drank to excess to some extent and his companions were not the best. Finally the couple removed to the Colorado, a lodging house of a cheap and not of the most particular kind, and here the final tragedy occurred.

In the meanwhile, however, young Sanchez had professed great solicitude concerning his wife's welfare in case of his decease, and had secured an insurance upon his life to the amount of $5,000 in her favor. Not to be outdone in generosity she consented to take out $1,000 of insurance upon her own life in his favor. The policies were all made out and delivered, the last one, for $5,000, just two days before the killing.

At this time it was evident that Sanchez's financial resources were running low. He already owed his landlord, and as he was earning no money and probably hesitated to call upon his father after having got rid of $1,200 in about three months, it is thought he determined to get rid of his wife and collect the insurance upon her life. He was away from the lodging house on Friday night preceding the murder, and about 8 o'clock went to the police station, with a story that he had been "held up" and robbed of $5. Investigation by the police failed to discover the assailant, and they concluded that Sanchez's story was of doubtful truth.

Subsequent events, however, seem to show that he was method in his madness.

At 2 o'clock on Saturday morning the inmates of the lodging house were aroused by the sound of pistol shots, and, rushing into the hall, found Sanchez, dressed in trousers and shirt, running about the place flourishing a revolver. He declared that some one had shot his wife and had run down the back stairs. An examination of his room revealed his wife dead in the bed, with a bullet through her brain and powder marks on her hair and the bed sheet, showing that she must had been fired at close range. Sanchez declared that the assassin had fired from the doorway, which was at least ten feet from the bed; that he had awakened to see the man running away, and taking his pistol from beneath his pillow had shot at and pursued him.

The story was not believed, and Sanchez was immediately arrested. Since then, by the influence of military friends and a liberal application of the "sweating" process, he has confessed that he himself fired the shot, but claims that it was accidental, and that he awoke at 4 o'clock, thinking of the hold up, and in a semiconscious condition seized his revolver, which exploded, causing the tragedy.

This version of the affair is not accepted by the authorities, and, as Sanchez lied in his first story of the killing, effort will be made to force a further confession from him.

WOMAN WHO WOULDN'T.

And, as Is Usually the Case, She Didn't—A Russian Incident.

An illustrative case of "the woman who wouldn't" is reported from Moscow. A pretty peasant maiden of the suburbs of that Russian city was recently coerced by her relatives into consenting to marry a small proprietor of the neighborhood for whom she entertained a special dislike. The wedding party appeared, a few days ago, before the altar of one of the city churches. The service went on until the officiating priest put the usual question: "Wilt thou take this man?" etc. The girl replied with an emphatic negative, and all the persuasions of her friends failed to change her resolution. The wedding party returned to the house of the bride's parents, who again vainly endeavored to shake the girl's obduracy. The unfortunate and unwilling girl was then soundly beaten, not only by her parents, but also by the friends of the bridegroom. She was carried bodily into a room by the wedding party, and the marriage service was recommenced. Again came the crucial question to the bride, and once more the oldmaid girl with tears and blushes, refused. She declared: "No; a thousand times no!" and appealed to the protection of the priest, which was readily granted.

It is doubtful if the murderer himself knows the number of his victims. The nonchalantly tells the story of some fresh tragedy to the examining magistrate from time to time as the details recur to his lessened mind. Investigation in each case so far has produced full corroboration of the murderer's narrative.
