LOVE'S SWEET REWARD.

I care not for the thorny way,
Though e'er beset black above me.
The dark is made sweetly to the day,
If "You love me, dear—you love me!"

The winter blossoms as the May,
And sweet birds are singing,
The storm lock all the rainbow's ray,
And all life's barbaries are ringing,

And bright the night and clear the day,
If storms above me,
While life and death shall say,
"You love me, dear—you love me!"

No [illegible] I should begin [illegible] to-night, for Karl [illegible] to hear me—I [illegible] to hear Irving [illegible] Karl Angel, by [illegible] to say to-night [illegible] ing. I wish I had [illegible] Understanding [illegible] look as much like [illegible] Hayes. He's not here [illegible] Hayes." He [illegible] Where's Caffyn? Is [illegible] not to be found. Sorry to hear [illegible] indisposition, Mr. Caffyn," I [illegible] wondering a little what it all [illegible]

"No, you're not". He turned [illegible] sharply. Truth to tell, it [illegible] at once that the thing was [illegible] but that was prepo- [illegible] "It's a rare chance, [illegible] you happened to [illegible] style, Wentworth [illegible] Quiet! That's a bit of [illegible] he rather annoyed [illegible] and I had to remind [illegible] was only number two. And [illegible] things? There [illegible] that trunk, just as they [illegible] Midland tour. [illegible] By Jove! I reckon, [illegible] absently, "Blake is [illegible] Has he posted an [illegible]
