Italy In London. I Londoners have visited the trict, which lies in the neighborhood of Theobald's road and Hatton Garden, and some with inquiring minds have strolled up Leather lane and watched the Italian ico cream venders and fortune telling women with pretty leve birts, intermingled with the dirty, nciey, street hawkers, common to all lume. It is amazing to learn how these Italians crowd together in the poky little houses of the courts and alleys. Generally a house is hired by an one, who sublets to as many of his countrymen as he can respectably squeezo in. The cellurs are utilized as sleeping apartments, and in the morning as many as 30, even 80, men will Steel Balls. The largest center in the world for the manufacture of steel balls for ball bearings is situated at Schweinfurt, in Bavaria. A couple of factories there, owned by one firm, produce close upon 300,000,000 balls annually with the la-bor of 600 men working ten hours daily. The total production of Gormany is stated to be about 650,000;000, while England and France combined turn out only about 70,000,000 additional.

Speinty as a Reformer. "Swearing is growing less, decidedly so," writes Edward Bok in The Ladios' Home Johrnal. "All students of men agree in his view, just as excessive alcoholic drinking is falling into disuse. The principal reason for the decline of both excessive awearing and drinking is that men are getting more and more gargful to refrain from any habit which places their self-control in peril. Society is constantly growing more instant with a man who lacks outlooks. olio drinking is falling into disuse. patient with a man who lacks equipoise, while the keener demands of business necessitates men being more moderate in all things. Many stories are told of McDonald Clarke, known 50 years ago in Now York as the "Mad Poet," which show that he had a vein of great abrewduess such as is often possessed by people who are counted insone.

One day he was seated at a table in a New York hotel quietly eating his simple dinner when two young men took not gentlemen in the best sense of the word, and it occurred to them that they might have some sport with the poor poet. Consequently one of them said in in unnecessarily clear tone:

"I have seen almost everything and everybody in New York except McDon-ald Clarks. I have a great admiration for his posms, and I would give a great deal to see the man."
When he paused, the mad post leaned forward and said with evident gratifica-"Sir, I am McDonald Clarke, whom you say you wish to see." The young man stared at him with much rudeness for a moment, and then, drawing a quarter from his pocket, he laid it on the post's plate, saying, "That's for the sight!" Clarke looked at the coin for an instant, and then, placing it in his pocket, he fook out a "York shilling," 121/2 cents. This he handed to the young man, saying gravely, "Children half price." Youth's Companion.

A Decidedly Novel Claim A claim once made on the explorer Cameron, in the neighborhood of Gaboon. Africa, shows the peculiar work ings of the native . African's mind. Some of Cameron's possessions proved unduly attractive to a native, and ho determined on transferring the owner ship to himself. He accordingly paid another native $200 to procure for him the coveted goods.

The assistant took the money and did his best to carn it, but Mr. Cameron had perversely locked up the very artioles that the follow's employer had set his heart upon. The man could not carry out his bargain, and neither did he feel that he could part with the money Therefore be ran off with it. What nore legical than that the man who was the loser by $200 should expect the explorer to make the loss good? This he bestredly did expect.

He went to Mr. Cameron and told him the story, domanding in the first place the $200 which he, Cameron, by ocking up his goods, had compelled the complainant to lose, and, secondly, the actual price of the goods themselves, which, but for these arbitrary measures would now have been in his possession. It is not stated that his expectations were realized. - Watchman.

Sterne's Destitution. Laurence Sterne, the writer, was the victim of the intensest poverty. A little borrow 25 from his friend Garrick Upon arriving, he heard music and thew that a party was going on. He heard the merry laughter, and, gently replacing the uplifted knocker, retraced
