Christ Church S. S. Entertainment

One of the best entertainments of the season was held in Marsh Hall last Friday evening in connection with Christ church Sunday School. A large audience was in attendance, and the encores and rounds of applause which were heard time after time testified to the popularity of the entertainment. Mr. J. H. Dundas was director and to him and his able assistants, especially Miss Majorie Mann and Miss Lottia Lucas, is due the credit for bringing to successful issue a month's careful training of the children of the school. The Rev. J. R. Newell was the program following:

1. "Carol, Carol, Christmas," by the scholars. 2. Duet. "I don't Want to Play in Your Yard," by Frances Newell and Ruby Trelford.

A change was now made in the order of procedure, when the two handsome by the rector to the children and scholars of the school. When this pleasing duty was performed the children assembled on the stage and sang carol, Then the audience rose to their feet and joined heartily in the land we love." #### Farmers and Pigs

The Narkdale Fork Packing Company is being organized for the purpose of carrying on a pork curing industry in Markdale in its various branches. Owing to its being in the centre of a first-class section of the country where the right sorts of coarse grains are grown, suitable for feeding to and producing the right kind of pork for the British markets, Markdale has been selected as a suitable place for the establishment of this industry, and as this movement is largely for the benefit of the farming community whose support for its solid and healthy maintenance is a positive necessity, the promoters of the scheme are eadeavoring to place the lion's share of the stock in their bands by inducing each to become shareholders in the

> The farmers who take stock and thus become shareholders will do well to remember that in addition to the enhanced price that they will receive for their hogs by having a business of this kind in their midst, they will also receive a division of the profits as they accrue in the concern. Another object in the establishing of such an industry in this neighborhood is to give the farmers a home and everyday market for their hogs and also to encourage the raising of larger numbers of suitable hogs to suit the tastes of the British people, who, if they get the right sort of product do not so much mind the price they have to pay for it. It will also bring the producer and consumer in closer touch with each other and give the producer a legitimate share of the proffts which now find a resting place in the coffers of the mon-

That hogs deteriorate through shipcomfort but has largely increased our ping and long hauls is conceded by the most competent judges, and that the producer is always shouldered with such loss no sane person for a moment doubts. This surely demonstrates the importance of a home market. The hogs delivered either on foot or in wagons direct at the factory will at all times command the highest price. The directors of the company will be elected from the stockholders and every endeavor should be put forth to select the best men for the positions, and such being the case the farmers should be alive to their own interests and become stock holders at once. In conclusion we would ask in all fairness what farmers think of hog raising in the past considering the treatment they have received at the hands of those that at present cure and lit the raw material for the British markets and be alive to their own interests and not let the present opportunity slip by JAMES BRODYE.
