Fiddle Butt Stealers. There is a reason why the Adirondack forest fires should become more destructive each succeeding year. Most of the timber there is spruce. While spruce is used for various purposes it it valued chiefly as material for the manufacture of sounding boards for all kinds of musical instruments.

That part of the spruce tree which is free from branches, extending to from 20 to 30 feet above the ground, is known as a fiddle butt. As there are no branches in that part of the trunk there are no knots, and when the lumber is sawed it presents a smooth surface, an essential in the making of sounding boards.

The stealing of fiddle butts is carried on as a regular industry by hundreds of men who own small farms on the outer edges of the forests. These men go into the woods in winter and cut down thousands of great spruce trees. They take from each tree only the base log, which they sell at the nearest sawmill, allowing the remainder of the tree to lie where it falls. The branches become dry as tinder in time, and when a fire is started by a careless hunter or woodsman they furnish an abundance of fuel for the spread of the conflagration. Many efforts have been made to punish the fiddle butt stealers, but it is a fact that no jury has ever been got together that would bring in a verdict of guilty. It is claimed, with much evidence of truth, that a jury has never been selected in that section that did not have a fiddle butt stealer among its members.

Hearn's Vivid Imagination. Many years ago Lafcadio Hearn was reporter on the staff, of a Cincinnati newspaper. One day a famous steeple climber was going to scale the spire of the cathedral to repair the cross that topped the spire 200 feet above the sidewalk. The afternoon he first scaled the spire thousands of people watched him breathlessly as he slowly made his way up the outside of the steeple. Of course he was interviewed, and he said boastingly that the task was so easy that he could just as well carry a man up on his back.

That noon Hearn said timidly to his city editor that he had read of the steeple climber's offer and would be glad to ascend the spire on his back. The editor tried to point out to Hearn the peril of the thing, but he would not listen. Finally the steeple climber and Hearn arranged their end of the

At the appointed time Hearn mounted the steeple climber's shoulders, and the dizzy journey began. Tens of thougands of people watched the foolhardy pair. At last the cross was reached, and Hearn left his perch on the climber's shoulders. The mob in the streets below cheered, and then the two men returned to the ground safely.

Hearn went back to the office and sat down and wrote two columns of a story describing his sensations, and the glories of the view he had obtained from the steeple top. Such a glowing description of a city seen from a great height has never been read before or since. The most interesting thing about it was the fact that Hearn was so near sighted he could not see five feet beyond the tip of his nose.—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Sorrowful Tree. There is a tree in Persia to which the name "the sorrowful tree" is given. Perhaps because it blossoms only in the evening..

When the first star appears in the heavens the first bud of the sorrowful tree opens, and as the shades of night advance and the stars thickly stud the sky the buds continue gradually opening until the whole tree looks like one immense white flower. On the approach of dawn, when the brilliancy of the stars gradually fudes in the light of day, the sorrowful tree closes its flowers, and ere the sun is fully risen not a single blossom is visible. A sheet of flower dust as white as snow covers the ground around the foot of the tree, which seems blighted and withered during the day, while, however, it is actively preparing for the next nocturnal festival. The fragrance of the blossoms is like that of the evening primrose.

If the tree is cut down close to the roots, a new plant shoots up and attains maturity in an incredibly short time.

In the vicinity of this singular tree there usually grows another, which is almost an exact counterpart of the sorrowful tree, but less beautiful, and,

A Bride With Some Good Points. Some years ago in an agricultural district there lived a farmer who wanted to sell one of his cows. There was not at that time a weekly paper in which he could advertise, so he resolved to follow a local custom and ask the vicar of the parish when giving out his notices at church to advortise the cow. "Yes, farmer," said the vicur, "I should be willing to oblige you, but you don't attend my church." Presently, however, they struck a bargain that the vicar should advertise the cow, and the man in return promised to go to church. Now, unfortunately the man was deaf, and on the Sunday following when the vicar gave out the banns of marriage between Joseph So-and-so, bachelor, and Sarah So-and-so, spinster, the farmer took it for granted that the vicar was giving out particulars of his cow and shouted out:

You might as well say while you are about it that she is a most gentle creature and entirely free from vice." -Stray Stories

Wanted a Haunted House. The following curious letter was recently received by a house renting agency in London: "Have you a reputed haunted house

Should there be no ghost, then, if you wish it, I shall be willing to testify on oath to the fact. But should I see an apparition I will keep the matter secret and only acquaint you with the circumstances. I will pledge myself not to pander to local gossip. I have a small income on which I can subsist. My sole object in thus applying to you is to be allowed to live in a place in which I do not need to pay any rent.

The inquirer was informed that the firm had no haunted houses on its list. but would inform him when it had.

Jack Redeemed Himself. A mother, indignant to find her little son very low in his class at school.

exclaimed wrathfully "I am out of all patience with you, Jack! I should just like to know why George Jones is always at the head of his class, while you are always at the foot!"

Jack hesitated for a moment, and then, looking his mother squarely in the face, he said innocently: "You forget that Jones has very clever parents!"-Tit-Bits. A light and trifling mind never takes in great ideas and never accomplishes anything great or good.—Sprague.

A Perfect Dingnosis. George Fordyce, who came in 1762 from Edinburgh to London, very speedily made himself a name by a series of public lectures on medical selence, which he afterward, published in a volume entitled, "Elements of the Practice of Physics" which passor through many editions. Unfortunately he was given to drink, and, though he never was known to be dead drunk, yet he was often in a state which rendered him unfit for professional du-One night when he was in such a condition he was suddenly sent for to attend a lady of title who was very ill. He went, sat down, listened to her story and felt her pulse. He found he was not up to his work. He lost his wits and in a moment of forgetfulness exclaimed, "Drunk, by Jove!" Still he managed to write out a fulld prescrip-

Early next morning he received a message from his noble patient to call on her at once. Dr. Fordyce felt very uncomfortable. The lady evidently intended to upbraid him either with an improper prescription or with his disgraceful condition. But to his surprise and relief she thanked him for his prompt compliance with her pressing summons and then confessed that he had rightly diagnosed her case, that unfortunately she occasionally indulged too freely in drink, but that she hoped he would preserve inviolable socreey as to the condition he had found her in. Fordyce listened to her grave as a judge and said: "You may depend upon me, madam. I shall be as silent as the grave."-Gentleman's Magazine.

Dangerous Trading.

Upon returning to camp we sound that John, the driver, had purchased a load of pumpkins, which the native men and women from the Mazoe valley had brought to the wagon to barter. At first I was pleased, but when I found that. John had traded away about 20 pounds of preservative, consisting of alum and arsenic, which he had mistaken for salt, I was filled with dismay! We knew not the villages whence the natives had come, nor could we explain the mistake, as we were ignorant of their language; and before my scared mental vision rose piles of dead Mashonas, pestilence and war on the whites-provided there remained enough live Mashonas to make

Hence it was that before daylight the next morning we left for the fort. We made no mention of the matter to any one, but a year later, when visiting the Mazoe valley. I inquired of the natives if there had been any disease among them about the time when the white men arrived in the country. They said there had been an epidemic of stomach aches, but, fortunately, no one had died from it; so my conscience was profoundly relieved.—"On the South African Frontier."
