First we will briefly consider what

We know that milk is made from the food the cow eats, and that the food is first converted into blood; af- neck; ter that the process it undergoes is, as yet, largely a mystery.

There are two general theories advanced-the metamorphic and the transudation. The advocates of the first claim that the cellular tissue of the udder is built up and then broken down, and so changed into milk. This theory cannot be accepted as the only source of milk production, for it would be hardly possible for a cow giving from sixty to eighty pounds of milk a day to build up and break the course of twenty-four hours.

The transudation theory is that the milk is simply filtered from the blood as it passes through the udder.

If this be true, then we would expect to find in the blood the same constituents found in milk. A comin the udder, while the other properties are filtered from the blood.

Bacteriologists tell us the small amount of milk which has collected in the test abounds with injurious forms of bacteria, while the remaining portion of the milk is practically germ free, and they recommend not allowing the first stream to go into the milk pail. I have often heard a person say,

"I can get more milk from that cow than anyone else." or "This animal will not let another person near her." Why Is it? In such cases there is between the cow and her milker a symsome mysterious way crept into her affections, and it is her pleasure and delight to show her regard in the brimming pail. CONDITION IN CATTLE AND HORSES.

"Condition" in a horse has a very different meaning to the same expression as applied to cattle. In the case of the latter, the more heavilyfleshed the animal is the better is its "condition" reputed to be, whereas in the case of horses it is not great wealth of flesh, but great muscular development, so essential to the performance of the work expected of it, that coestitutes the highest condition. London Telegraph.

A considerable wealth of flesh is of course necessary for animals which are used for draft purposes, because in such cases "weight" tells, but in the case of animals required for fast work it is sheer hard muscle rather than preponderance of flabby flesh that is MILKING TIME. especially required. Anecdotes of Colonel Ege. Colonel Ege was a famous character in the early days. Although living h Doniphan county, he was often in Atchison, followed by a pack of hounds. He was a high toned southern gentleman, with a kind heart.

One day while returning home from this city he came across a man whose wagon was stuck in the mud in Independence creek bottom. Colonel Ege at once started in to help the man pry out his wagon with a fence rail. While both were working away Ege became angry and yelled to the man, "Lift, you son of a gun; you are not lifting a pound." The man picked up the end gate of the wagon and split it over Ege's head, laying him up for three weeks. Ege had his hat off when he was struck and was so bald before coming to Kansas that he was known as the Bald Eagle of Maryland.

Ege always carried a pistol and was always trying to shoot through somebody's hat without hitting him. One day, at the Independence creek ferry. he shot at a man, but aimed a little low and creased him. But Ege was always a gentleman; he took the man are too small to notice an hour after, him until he recovered.—Atchison

Spanish Proverbs. Proverbs uncomplimentary to the fair sex are common in Spain. "A woman, like a pavement, should be well trampled on to be kept in order," "A woman is like a caudle, Twist her neck if you wish her to be good;" "Beware of a bad woman, and do not trust a good one;" "Crying in a woman and limping in a dog is, all a sham;" "A cock crows on his own dunghill, but hens cackle everywhere" (this in reference to the supposed garrulousness and inquisitive disposition of the sex); "Show me a magpie without a snot upon the whole system, bringing and I will show you a woman without a fault." In English counterparts are not wanting, for example:

Our First Woman Editor. According to the Hartford Courant, that paper in 1777 was owned and edited and managed by a woman, whose name comes down to modern days as "the Widow Watson." She had "exclusive charge" of the journal. After a couple of years Mrs. Watson married a leading citizen of Hartford, and after that date she no doubt let him advise and assist in the conduct of the paper. But she holds the record for the first woman editor in the country.

Dealers in charcoal in Hayana are said never to have yellow fever, while in lay circles it is advised always to have it about during its prevalence, because of its absorbing properties, is is presumed.

She Didn't Pay. Not all car conductors are merely hardened ringers in of fares. A poor woman got on a Twenty-third street crosstown car at Fourth avenue, and as it was well under way and she was about to hand her fare to the conductor she asked him if he transferred to Sixth avenue. On being told no, she drew back her 5 cents and asked to be let off.

"I've a long ways to go on Sixth avenue," she s.id, "and I'd better walk to there and then ride."

The car then had reached Madison avenue.

"Wait till we get across the street." answered the conductor. She waited, and instead of stopping there he let the car go on, past the transfer station and across Broadway to Sixth avenue. There he pulled the bell and looked at

"Thank you," she said gratefully. He had carried her within a block of where she wanted to go and had taken no fare.-New York Telegram.

More Than He Could Stand.

"What's this?" demanded the police, hurrying to the scene. "A hold up?" A pale, scholarly looking man in spectacles was standing over a burly ruffian and shaking his slender fist at the prostrate form

"I presume that is what you would term it," he replied. "This fellow stopped me just now and ordered me to hold up my hands. I complied, and perversion of correct English that no granddaughter. man can utter in my presence unrebuked."
