In Memoriam

The tragic death of the late Charles Ryan has evoked a feeling of sympathetic regret amongst all classes of the community that has perhaps never before in the history of this community been so universal at the demise of a fellow-being. Deceased was for many years actively engaged in the timber and lumbering business, and his employees and those with whom he came more closely in contact, are those who outside his own family circle—most keenly feel his loss. Undoubtedly he had toiled in various enterprises until he had acquired a competency of this world's goods; and, in an interview with the writer a short time ago his labors during the past winter promised to be highly remunerative. His geniality of manner surrounds his memory with a halo of sunshine, which will not be dimmed in the minds of those who had the pleasure of his intimate companionship. His sorrowing relatives may have the consolation of knowing they have the companionship of the entire community in their poignant grief.—Requiescat in pace.

The Late Samuel Douglass

A highly respected and honorable citizen passed away June 13th, in the person of Mr. Samuel Douglass of Vandeleur. For many years the deceased had suffered from a distressing form of paralysis, which gradually grew worse, making life a burden with no alleviating features. But he patiently submitted with rare Christian fortitude. His devoted wife was ever attentive throughout the years of his great affliction and did all that human kindness could do to soothe his distress. The day before his death he received the Blessed Sacrament. A short time afterward he lapsed into an unconscious state, and remained in that condition until the end, which he peacefully fell asleep. The funeral was largely attended on the afternoon of Friday, the 22d. The interment took place in the Markdale Public Cemetery. On Sunday evening in Christ Church a memorial service was held. The Rev. Mr. Newell read for the scriptural lesson St. John XIV and took for text the third verse. Mr. Douglas had selected this chapter and verse to be used at his obsequies. There was a large congregation present. The choir, under the leadership of Mr. J. H. Dundas, rendered the usual portions of the service with unusual eloquence.

Cutting and Curing

Clover

Science and practice alike indicate that clover is one of the very best all-around stocks. The farmer can grow it as well as being one of the best of the fertilizers of the soil. They also agree that to secure the greatest amount of nutritious in the clover, it is best to let the plants grow to a height of 6 to 8 inches, then cut them down to 4 to 5 inches, and let them dry in the sun. Then roll them up in moderate-sized cocks, not too rolling into heaps, but by placing even-sized forks level and solid one on top of another so that the whole may settle evenly and the sides droop uniformly all around, thus fitting it to turn rain. Left to sweat and cure in the cocks for two or three days or more, if circumstances are favorable, and turned over an hour or two before being loaded, weather permitting, in order to dry off dampness in the bottom, the best possible quality of hay may be secured—hay which stock will eat with a keen relish, and for which they will give profitable returns in weight of meat and milk or wool, and properly prepared, may also constitute a part of the winter rations of hogs and poultry to good purpose.

The original object of the "Boxer"
