TO KEEP A BULL SAFE.

every day we read in the papers of some one gored to death by a bull. But almost always it is a bull that has been more or less handled and not one that has been running loose constantly with a herd and therefore open to suspicion of being wild and possibly dangerous. These tragedies occur so often that we think some suggestions by Henry E. Alvord. Chief of the Dairy Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry at Washington, ought to be placed within reach of all who keep one or bran. more bulls. It is a fact well known by regular stockmen that any built may be very dangerous; it is also just as well known that any bull properly trained, kept in subjection, and managed may be perfectly safe. We quote the suggestions for training and management entire:

"The chief objection made to bulls of some age is that they are likely to be vicious and dangerous. Every one recognizes the difference in tem- than those allowed to run loose. perament between the fleshy, beefy character: but experience and obsermarked dairy type are much alike in ly. disposition regardless of breed, as among men, some bulls will be found a good egg producer. of naturally bad temper, but it is believed that the great majority of bulls. of all the dairy breeds, can be safely time and wash off. kept until too old for service and handled without serious trouble, if only properly reared and judiciously for a mere existence. managed. being handled from calfhood, but without fondling or encouraging frolic. Give it kind, quiet, fjrm and unvarying treatment, and keep it always under subjection, that it may never know its strength and power. Insert the nose ring before it is a year old, keep this renewed so as to be always strong, and always lead and bandle the animal with staff in the hands of a discreet and trusty man. The bull should never run loose in yard or pasture, but should be provided with abundant and regular exercise, always under restraint, and full control. The 'walk around' arrangement, like the sweep horse power, affords a fair degree of voluntary exercise, but is hardly sufficient. The best plan seems to be to provide a suitable tread power with a governor

HORSE HINTS.

Correct feeling, clean water, comfortable housing, thorough currying and brushing, plenty of work and good care are the safeguards of the health of the farm horse.

The horse that is compelled to pull his hay from a rack above his head will generally be troubled by inflammation of the eyes: When he throws up his head and noses the hay all the loose dirt and seeds will fall from the hay, and the horse will get more or less of it in his eyes. Much trouble may be caused by such racks, even with the best and cleanest of hay. Lower the racks.

When the horse is suffering from collar and harness rubbing bathe the sore spots in lukewarm water and castile soap, and after drying thoroughly with a soft cloth, apply with witch hazel. The witch hazel is mildly astringent, and therefore closes the lacerated pores and thus soothes by protecting the exposed nerves from the air. The warm water keeps up the circulation of the blood in the congested area and the alkali in the soap disinfects the galled spots. This simple treatment, if it can be followed (by rest for the galled animal, will hasten the formation of a new coat on the galled places.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

A peculiar accident occurred in Western town recently. The big iron safe in s shoe factory refused to open, and the bookkeeper and engineer conceived the idea that they could burn out the combination by use of carbon and electricity. It took several hours to accomplish their purpose, but they finally succeeded, but not until they had stood for several hours in the glare of the electric light taking turns at holding the wire and carbon. When the work was over both complained of a dizziness and pain in the head which increased as the hours passed, and in a short time both went suddenly blind at about the same time. All efforts Saurage Casinte New to restore their sight have been unwould regain her health. She continued using the pills, and from that Kwang Hsu formulates his edicts.
