LONGING.

Ah, if you knew how soon and late
My eyes long for a sight of you,
Since passing by my gate
You'll bring me until fall of dew!
If you but knew!

Ah, if you knew how sick and sore
My life long for the want of you,
Straightway you'd enter at the door
And clasp my hand between your two.

Ah, if you knew how lost and lone
I watch and weep and wait for you,
You'd press my heart close to your own
Till love had me through and through.
If you but knew!

TWO RED ROSES.

Why Both Women Felt Better After an Explanation Was Made.

There is an innate satisfaction in the possession of the genuine. On the other hand, there is a grateful sense of superiority in having got the better of some. One in the palming off of the artificial. So it is really rather difficult to decide offhand whether it is more pleasing to exhibit the true or the spurious. As a matter of fact, the latter is of such skilful contrivance these days as to make it almost impossible of detection.

At a recent Saturday evening "at home," a function at which the present chafing dish plays an important part, the appearance of the hostess was admirably set off by the delicately tinted tea rose, fragrant, modest and bewitching, which peeped out from the artistically arranged coils of copper-colored hair. Wherever the hostess moved, these moved, too, with the graceful admiration and feminine envy. The rose, with its unassumptious beauty, was just the touch necessary to the success of the evening.

Among the guests was a young matron of classic features and raven hair. As it happened, she was the only one of the invited who wore a rose in her hair. A blood red specimen gleamed and shone in the folds of its dusky environment, and the woman was very good to look upon as she moved across the room. Others had carried bouquets in their hands, but she alone wore a rose in her hair.

Yet she was not happy. She felt that the hostess had outstripped her in the matter of hair ornament. When admiring glances were turned her way, she heeded them not, because she imagined they were comparing glances and not signs of approval; that their casters were courting her, unfavourably, with the hostess, who wore the tea rose. And so, after a time, when the hour for going home came, the young matron was moved, in spite of herself, to concede to the hostess:

"Good night, dear. How charming you looked with that lovely rose in your hair."

"Oh, I am so glad you liked it!" said the other in an embarrassed sort of way. She hesitated a minute, glanced at the red rose on the head of her guest, and then said, "Of course you know it is an imitation."

"You don't say so!" exclaimed the call girl.

"Yes, and I have been embarrassed all evening thinking how unnatural it must look beside your lovely red rose."

"Oh," said the young woman, in a burst of unvoiced frankness, "pink is artificial."

And all the way home she felt better than she had felt during the evening.

It gives me great pleasure to write in praise of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and the good they have done me. I am never without them.

I have been a great sufferer with pains in my back in the region of my kidneys. I was very sick, and at times could not attend to my work at all.

I used several medicines, but nothing I ever tried seemed to help me in the least, until a friend of mine advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I immediately found relief and was able to resume my work.

I used altogether seven boxes before being completely cured. Since then I have never had the slightest indication of a return of the trouble.

It is hard to understand how anyone will continue to suffer from Lambe Back, Rheumatism, Lumbar Scoliosis, &c., when Dodd's Kidney Pills are a simple and effective remedy.
