ROYALTY IN CANADA.

Magnificent Welcome to the Duke and Duchess.

A despatch from Montreal says:—The Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York accomplished the first stage of their journey through Canada on Wednesday, making a fast of five hours from Quebec to Montreal. The morning was ideal for traveling, a sunny, cool September day. But when Montreal was reached the rain clouds, which seem to hover ominously in the wake of the Duke burst once more, and the Montreal visit as they had for a while threatened the sad depression that at Quebec. The Duke and Duchess, however, did not have a question of the success of the royal tour, so far as Montreal is concerned.

ARRIVED IN MONTREAL.

Not less than twenty thousand people had gathered in Montreal for a sight of the Duke, and practically the whole population turned out for the occasion. The train, which was the first to arrive at the station, was a magnificent sight, and the Duke and Duchess were greeted with a much hand-clapping. Mounted police came next and after them the Hussars closely followed by the royal carriage. A bugler blew and the Duke and Duchess were cheered long and heartily. Both bowed, and the Duke repeatedly taking off his silk hat to his future subjects. The pair left the carriage station hurriedly and entered the station, the Duchess leaning on the arm of Lord Strathcona. The embarkation and departure was without incident, the royal pair taking kindly leave of those who were to remain behind and the train steamed out at nine o'clock and was soon speeding towards the Canadian Capital.

ARRIVAL AT THE CAPITAL.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 20.—Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York arrived in Ottawa a few minutes before noon to-day. The welcome extended the future King and Queen of the British Empire was of the most enthusiastic character. While the royal train steamed into the Regina street depot of the Canadian Atlantic Railway, the band of the 43rd Regiment of the Ottawa Field Battery belched forth a welcome in the form of.

A ROYAL SALUTE.

The headquarters staff of the Canadian militia, a royal escort from the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, the Governor General's escort of Royal Canadian Dragoons, the 8th Regiment and the Ottawa Field Battery were at the station.

The royal party was received by Lord Minto, General O'Grady, the headquarters staff of the Canadian militia, and a delegation from the Ottawa Civic Reception Committee. Their Royal Highnesses rode in their own carriage, which they brought along with them.

The royal occasion, starting from the station, proceeded along Elgin to McLeod thence to Metcalf, Sparks, Bank and Wellington to Parliament Hill.

ALL ALONG THE ROUTE.

Thousands of people tried to get a glimpse of the royal pair in their carriage as the procession passed at different points en route. The decorations along the procession line from the station to the grounds were deserving of the words of approval that had been expressed concerning them, but coming to the grounds, they were of the most elaborate character. If there was a fault at all, they were too elaborate.

Over three thousand school children sang "God Save the King" when the Duke and Duchess arrived on Parliament Square. The Mayor of Ottawa led the way to receive them, followed by Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier and all the Cabinet Ministers except Dr. Borden and Mr. Tarte, who were prevented from being present on account of injuries from the accident on the steamer Frontenac at Quebec.

His Royal Highness, in replying to Ottawa addresses, referred to the expressions of loyalty which he conjoined. He touched on the visit which the King, his father, paid to Ottawa, when he laid the corner stone of the Parliament buildings in 1886, of the bringing about of Confederation, and the great progress made by Canada since that time. The mutual toleration shown by both races helped materially to bring about these good results. He spoke of the city of Hull having recovered from the great fire which overtook it, and concluded by saying that at no time in the history of the British Empire were the ties of union more closely drawn together than at the present time.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and other Cabinet Ministers accompanied the royal party from the pavilion to their carriage, and they drove to Rideau Hall among the Ottawa has given the most beautiful reception that has ever been accorded to a royal party which they have yet received.

TROLLEY ACCIDENT.

Three Ladies in a Carriage Fatally Injured.

A despatch from St. Catharines carried a very serious accident occurred about three o'clock Wednesday afternoon, when a trolley car on the Niagara St. Catharines and the Niagara Railway ran into a rig at the Niagara Street crossing. Four ladies, Mrs. Thomas and her two daughters, and Miss McMillan, were in the carriage at the time. It is said that they did not notice the trolley until almost upon the tracks, when the horses became frightened and rushed ahead.

THE PRESIDENT'S FUNERAL.

Particulars of the Last Ceremonies at His Home in Ohio.

A despatch from Canton says:—The streets of the little city of Canton on Monday morning were adorned with waving plumes, dancing flowers, and dandy packed bodies of men and women, and moving men assembling here for the procession which was to escort the remains of the late President McKinley to his final resting place. The procession was a complete triumphal march, and the most magnificent of the kind ever witnessed in the history of the United States. The cortege was headed by a band of music, followed by a company of soldiers, and then by the remains of the late President, which were borne by a caisson. The procession was accompanied by a large number of citizens, and the streets were lined with people who came to pay their last respects to the late President. The procession was a grand and impressive one, and it was a fitting tribute to the late President's memory.

TYPE CROWDING PEOPLE.

The people overflowed the sidewalks and literally packed the streets from side to side. The streets were so crowded that it was impossible to move as a common impulse toward the old familiar McKinley cottage where the remains were lying. Military guards, stationed at the four corners of the lawn, paced their beats, but there was no other sign of life about the house of mourning. The window shades were drawn down. A long border of black which had been put in place after the body was removed to the house last night, fringed the roof of the porch from which President McKinley had spoken to delegations from every State in the Union, and where he had met and talked with the chiefs of his party. No badge of conventional mourning was on the door. Instead there was a beautiful wreath of palms beset by a beautiful band of wide purple satin ribbon.

TONS AND TONS OF FLOWERS.

When Mrs. McKinley came into the death chamber on Wednesday night, her last moments beside her dead husband, she wished to have a final look at the upturned face, but this was impossible, and the sealed casket with the flowers and flags were all that she saw.

The wreath of flowers was probably the most beautiful ever seen in the United States. The conservatories of the country had been decorated to supply them. By the direction of the monarchs of Europe, the South American rulers, the Governors of the British colonies in Australia and Canada, the Emperor

BRITISH FORCE CAPTURED.

Gen. Botha Invades Natal With 1500 Men and Two Guns.

A despatch from London says:—A despatch from Lord Kitchener to the War Office on Thursday reports two serious disasters in South Africa, and shows that the British are in a worse position than even the casualities indicate. It is no longer doubtful that the Boers are prepared to meet the new British methods which were to be adopted after September 15.

Lord Kitchener's despatch reads:—The Boers, on September 17, ambushed three companies of mounted infantry, with three guns, commanded by Major Gough, in the vicinity of Scheepers Nek. After severe fighting the British were overpowered, and lost their guns, the signals and breach blocks of which were first destroyed. Two officers and fourteen men were killed, and five officers and 25 men were wounded. Five officers and 150 men were made prisoners. Major Gough, who escaped during the night, reports that the Boers numbered a thousand men and that they were commanded by General Botha.

General French reports that Commandant Smuts, in order to break through a cordon, rushed on a squadron of the 17th Lancers at Elands River Poort, killing three officers and twenty men. The Boers, who were dressed in khaki, and were mistaken for British troops, lost heavily.

The intention of the Boers is to make a detour en route to gain a strong foothold both in Cape Colony and Natal. The position is acute, and there will be immediate reprisals on British inhabitants if the forfeiture and banishment of Lord Kitchener's proclamation are enforced.

Ulrecht, or Scheepers Nek, is close to Natal, and it is more than likely that General Botha has already invaded that country. The fight at Tarkas was in the middle eastern portion of Cape Colony, where the country is most difficult for British troops, and the inhabitants are largely pro-Boer. It is certain that the Boers will attempt to make a vigorous and aggressive campaign in British territory. The grass, which is now beginning to grow on the veld, will reduce the disadvantage of the Boers' shortage of stores.

Gen. Botha has with him 1,500 men. He has one Creusot gun and one pom-pom.
