NOTES AND COMMENTS

The successful life is the controlled life. To speak of a control implies the existence of something that is to be restrained, that is, of a force of energy capable of vigorous assertive action. Where nothing of mental or moral energy is found, the notion of control is not relevant and efficiency of any kind is impossible. But on the other hand, it is not sufficient for success simply that an individual should possess a vigorous mentality or an intense personality. Mere possession of power is not enough, the question of its proper mee must heeds also be considered. This direction or control of power is and constitutes. an important element of success in any career.
